ROBBING PETER?

THE more one learns about the acreage allotment for sugar beets, the more one is convinced that there is little rhyme or reason to the situation.

In the first place, the chief of the Sugar Section of the Department of Agriculture, was too "busy" to attend the meeting held in Chicago, and in his stead sent four "golden haired" boys to conduct the meeting. Too busy! It seems strange to us that an official of our government should be too busy to attend a meeting that is of national importance, not only to our farmers but to the general public as well.

The entire proceedings in this matter of sugar beet acreage allotment is predicated, it seems to us, upon the theory that the American farmer should take a "back seat" while sugar raised in every section of the world is allowed to come into the United States in direct competition to home produced sugar.

Not only is the acreage allotment a mess from the standpoint of allowing "offshore" sugar to invade our markets, but the allotments to the various sections of the United States shows a lack of judgment. Take for instance the case of the allotment to Colorado. That state for the past ten years has had a general decline in beet sugar production, until this year when the acreage was down to 130,000 acres. The peak year for Colorado was, it is reported, about 190,000. This decline is due to several causes, one, being that the land is showing a general debility in the raising of sugar beets. Yet according to the bughouse formula worked out by the chief (note the official title), Dr. Joshua Bernhardt, of the Sugar Section, Colorado's allotment was increased 60,000 acres! Do you see any sense to that?

Then take the case of our own section. It is a new industry, we have had only three years of sugar beet production. We have a new factory, capable of producing sugar from 20,000 acres, beginning with 800 acres in 1936 and rapidly increasing our acreage until this year we planted more than 17,000 acres, and every indication on the part of our farmers that they would be willing to increase the 1939 figure to somewhere between 30,000 and 35,000 acres—enough to warrant the building of an additional factory in the Snake River valley!

Yet with all this available information, the "golden haired" boys cut our acreage to 12,828—a loss of about 5000 acres. A loss, financially, to our farmers of some $400,000 annually, to say nothing of throwing land back into the production of grains and other crops that have been a sore spot for a long time.

It all boils down to the question—What's the reason for this allotment, anyway? If the "too busy" Bernhardt feels that there will be too much sugar on the market, why in the name of common sense doesn't he clamp down on the sugar quota that allows foreign sugar into our domestic markets? What do we owe these foreign countries that our American farmers, with their infinitely higher standard of living, should be penalized? And the last question—what are you Mr. and Mrs. Reader going to do about it?

Well—you can do something about it if you have a mind to—you can write to Congressman Walter M. Pierce, Congresswoman Nan Honey-

AN ODE TO THE P-LINES

Nero had his fiddle, Cleopatra had her way, Cow Holler's got his P-line, Three cheers and hooray! Where's the old time road boss, With his fresnos and his crew They'd build roads through Cow Hollow Within a week or two. But horses won't do nowadays And farmers have no sense We'll build it, says the big boys With a whole lot of expense, We'll survey it for PWA And WPA too We'll buy some new equipment Now what else is there to do? Farmers might build warm houses Or pay their water bill, Or throw it away on groceries They nearly always will. Fifty thousand for surveys, And forty to be sowed, Five thousand for the handling charge Five thousand for the road. A big dust cloud was rolling, That's all that we could see Then around the bend, a dirty gray Came school bus number three It bounced, it swayed then pitched and stopped. We thought it was hauling gravel When derailed it after a minute or two Kids started to unravel, Of course its not the driver, It's our roads we have to blame For kids that come home grimy And too tired to complain Now we up in Cow Holler, Are trying to make up our minds If in snow and mud our bus Can travel these P-line.
