BILL REGULATING PICKETING AND BOYCOTTING BY LABOR GROUPS AND ORGANIZATIONS

Sponsored by a group of agricultural organizations, including the Associated Farmer of Oregon, Oregon Farm Bureau, Eastern Oregon Wheat League and the Hood River Growers club, this measure is designed primarily to protect farmers and other producers from interference by organized labor through strikes or picketing.

In this connection the measure would make it unlawful "for any person, persons, association or organization to obstruct or prevent or attempt to obstruct or prevent, the lawful buying, selling, transporting, receiving, delivering, manufacturing, harvesting, processing, handling or marketing of any agricultural or other products."

Its scope, however, is by no means confined to labor disputes affecting agriculture but seeks to include all labor disputes in every industry.

It begins by defining a "labor dispute" to mean only an actual bona fide controversy between an employer and a majority of his employees over wages, hours or working conditions. Jurisdictional disputes between rival labor groups would be placed outside the ban and employers would be authorized to ignore both parties to such a dispute in dealing with his employees.

The measure would make it unlawful to either picket or boycott an employer or a business unless a labor dispute as defined in the act, should be in progress.

Labor organizations would be required to keep an accurate account of all receipts and disbursements and to make these records available to any member of the organization upon request. Fees, dues and fines of labor organizations would be limited to the legitimate needs of the organization.

Coersion or intimidation of employees by labor groups would be prohibited.

Circuit courts would be empowered to issue restraining order and injunctions in enforcing compliance with the terms of the measure. Violation of any of the provisions of the act would be made a misdemeanor.

THE TAX PAYER FOOTS THE BILL—WHY WORRY?

The periodic "plan" for another state building bobbed up again this week. Just who is sponsoring the plan, if any, has not as yet developed. It can be predicted, however, that unless the Industrial Accident commission has had a complete change of attitude toward attempted "raids" on the compensation fund, any proposal to finance a new building with its money will meet with vigorous opposition. While it is true that the present office building was financed with funds of the accident commission under a legislative act of 1927 the program met with such a storm of protest from employers who contribute to the fund as well as workmen who are under its protection that the session of 1929 declined the accident fund to be a "trust fund" to be used only for the purposes covered in the Workmen's Compensation act and waived any proprietary claim the state might have in the fund. Plans of the capitol group provide for another building to balance up the library building now under construction. Capitol gossip is constantly "planning" a new structure to be erected on the east block of the new site recently acquired by the state as a part of the capitol site. State departments, now housed in rented quarters, could make good use of such a building. But there are many obstacles to be overcome before this dream becomes a reality.

Excessive speed was the determining factor in approximately one-half of Oregon's fatal traffic accidents, according to Secretary of State Earl Snell, who warns that Oregon's basic speed law requires every driver to have his car under control at all times.

The proposal to employ disabled war veterans as guides to visitors to the new capitol will have to await legislative action it has been pointed out by officials. No appropriation was made by the last session for operation of the new building and Secretary of State Snell was compelled to go to the emergency board for enough money to employ janitors to take care of the building.

SUIT WILL COST MORE THAN THE 'PIONEER' EARNED IN LIFETIME

The pioneer who stands guard atop the new capitol is being fitted with a new suit this week. The suit, of gold leaf, will cover the figure from the top of his head to the soles of his boots and will cost in the neighborhood of $500.

VETS WILL HAVE TO AWAIT POLITICAL ACTION

The proposal to employ disabled war veterans as guides to visitors to the new capitol will have to await legislative action it has been pointed out by officials. No appropriation was made by the last session for operation of the new building and Secretary of State Snell was compelled to go to the emergency board for enough money to employ janitors to take care of the building.
