GROWERS PURGE

THE hostility of Henry Wallace to the domestic beet sugar industry has been rendered more effective by his apologists among the growers themselves. The organized beet growers are now apparently conducting a purge. They are seeking leaders who will carry the ball for the farmer. They are securing men who will express growers opinions without consulting the democratic leadership.

Development of this domestic industry is outside of the philosophy of Henry Wallace. He never could tolerate it. His preference for selling Iowa lard to Cuba and at the same time selling the domestic beet grower down the river has long been made clear by his practice. We suspect the international situation has given Wallace encouragement in his aim to pacify Latin America and the countries of the Caribbean at the expense of the American producer. The strategic importance of Cuba is such that the strong man of the island, Batista the Hitler of the tropics, was welcomed in Washington and New York as though he were a fellow democrat. He returned to Cuba saying he had been promised a larger slice of the American sugar market. The quotas indicated he was making no vain boast. What happened to the sugar market after they were announced hit the American sugar producer squarely between the eyes.

The beet growers of the Rocky Mountain region can find little to encourage them in the present situation. Nothing has occurred that could not be freely predicted in the light of 1933 pronouncements by the secretary of agriculture. Maintaining at the head of the sugar section men who were known to be hostile to domestic production in favor of off-shore cane has been Wallace's policy from the time there was a sugar section.

Meanwhile, the administration continues the policy of betraying sections of American producers for the will o'wisp of foreign trade. With surpluses on hand, the new deal has not scratched the surface of possible American markets. Secretary Hull, now the administration hero, must barter a long while to secure export demand comparable to the domestic consumption of a vast sugar producing area growing and refining at a profit all the sugar the nation consumes. Western irrigation development will furnish that productive capacity. The consumption of manufactured goods and foodstuffs of farmers under such projects would far exceed that of tropical field hands working on off-shore plantations, industrialized and owned on the continent. That is a vision apparently beyond the ken of Mr. Wallace whose books and other writings show he is no mean dreamer himself.—The Greeley Daily Tribune.

PARMA LUTHERAN CHURCH

A. A. Schmidt, Pastor
Once again we turn back the pages of history nineteen centuries. A weary world was waiting, hoping for the rising of the sun of righteousness with healing in his wings. The fulness of time came and God sent forth his son. Out of a heart filled with love eternal, the Father of all grace and mercy sent forth his only begotten son to become a lowly man, who thru his holy obedience, his innocent suffering and death, should seek and save that which was lost. 1938 years later we repeat the ancient prophecy fulfilled in us, "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given." His name shall be called Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins." In this Jesus there is salvation for all.

We invite you to come with us and worship Christ the Lord.
December 24 7:30 p. m. Christmas eve children's services.
December 25 6 a. m. Candle-light service with Holy Communion.
To all the good people of this community, we say may the spirit of Christ of Christmas fill your homes and lives at this joyous season that yours may be a merry Christmas.
