TODAY WE FOLLOW - TOMORROW WE LEAD

SO reads the motto of the graduating class of the Nyssa high school—the class of '39. How prophetic are those words "Today We Follow—Tomorrow We Lead". Through eight years of grade school and four years of high school, these young men and women have been following, have been doing their best to grasp the significance of life and its problems.

Of their days of following, this much must be said, they have applied themselves, they have been earnest, hard working, according to the interest shown in them and their problems. In their days of leadership, theirs will be a hard task. The world seems to have gone mad with the lust for war, it will be to these future citizens, just now entering upon the threshold of manhood and womanhood, that the world will look for safe guidance and sane reasoning in maintaining the peace for which the present generation fought twenty-one years ago.

Not only will the problem of war face them, but the problem of public debt will be their heritage—theirs to pay, and ponder over the wisdom or foolishness of what we oldsters are now so placidly saddling upon our leaders of tomorrow. Truly it is to be hoped that the class of '39 will live up to their motto "Tomorrow We Lead"—for only in real leadership—real Americanism can this nation hope to recover from the morass of public debt and the creeping paralysis of government dictation through ever increasing bureaus and commissions.

A LIVING PRICE

THE Dairyman's League News of New York observes that what all farmers want is at least a living price for their crops, and the right to a voice in setting the price at which they are sold. And, the News continues, there is but one way to win—for all farmers to stick together, and stand loyally by their farm marketing co-operative organizations.

Disorganization long held the farmer back economically and otherwise. He was at the complete mercy of middlemen, and was forced to take whatever price was offered or go without a sale.

Organization has changed that. Through marketing co-operatives, the farmer bargains with dealers on even grounds. They are in a position to demand and receive the best possible price. They are the strongest existing influence for agricultural progress—Industrial News Review.
