LET'S BE SPORTSMEN —

A COMMON designation of men, women and children who hunt game birds, animals or fish, is sportsman.

Yet even with the short time that our pheasant season has been opened—we have had farmer after farmer come into our office to buy No Hunting or Trespassing signs. The peculiar part of this is that the average farmer has no objection to sportsmen coming onto their farms to hunt birds—but they do object to the careless manner in which most so-called sportsmen conduct themselves while on their farms. One farmer informed us that already he had two calves shot by bird hunters. Now if anyone can tell us how in the world a hunter could mistake a calf for a pheasant, we'll buy him his next year's hunting license. But this shooting of livestock is not a matter of mistaken identity, but rather of carelessness on the part of the hunter.

If we are to enjoy and expect the hospitality of our farmers during the hunting season, may it not be a good idea for us hunters to adopt some "commandments"—along the line of the following:

1. I shall respect private property by asking the farmer for permission to hunt on his farm.
2. I shall determine where stock is pastured and refrain from hunting in the vicinity thereof.
3. I shall refrain from going upon or letting my dogs enter fields upon which is planted seed crops or other crops that are liable to be damaged when walked upon.
4. I shall take special precautions to see that all gates through which I pass shall be left exactly as I found them.
5. I shall use discretion when going over or through a fence, that the wires thereof are not pulled loose from the posts, nor stretched through my using the wires as a ladder to get on the other side.
6. And finally I shall conduct myself, while on other people's property, in such a manner as to justify the designation of "SPORTSMAN".

LET'S ALL BE NEUTRAL— ALL NON-PARTISAN

THE President of the United States in his neutrality proclamation has promised to try to keep us out of war. He has appealed for a truce in politics.

Every loyal American will support these two objectives.

Americans are determined not to be deceived again by talk of saving democracy, or the "War to End Wars."

The war in Europe is the direct result of a peace treaty, for which Americans died—a treaty that has kept alive the ancient feuds in the struggles for power, for territory, for resources and for markets. It is nothing new; over there, a human life weighs but little in the balance against empire-building.

The United States has been built by people whose ancestors came here to escape just such conflicts, and the tyrannies which are their consequence.

Wars are not launched by the people. They are started by leaders—leaders lusting for power and fame. But first they must fan the fires of prejudice and hate in order that the people will follow. Americans are determined this time not to be swayed either by the propaganda of the warring nations, or by the excitements of those at home who can't keep their heads.

It will not be difficult to keep the United States out of this war. All it will need is a determined will to stay at peace, on the part of the nation's leaders.

The Scandinavian countries, Holland and Switzerland, remained neutral in the World War, and will undoubtedly keep out of this one. They are realistic. Their leaders simply do not get the idea that the future of all humanity rests on their shoulders.

Farmers will subscribe one hundred per cent to the President's proposal for a truce in partisanship, and they will not think it unreasonable to ask him to set the example.

Having made himself the foremost issue in politics, they will first of all look to him for a pledge of abandonment of all personal political ambitions.

He will be expected to take the lead in the adjournment of politics by dismissing from his official family and from government office those violent disciples of hate, the Ickes, the Corcorans, and their ilk, who have disqualified themselves for public service by attacks upon the congressional majorities that refused to show partisanship in European affairs.

The President should, of course, pledge a decent respect for the independence of the radio; this is important, since he has power under the emergency proclamation to suspend, close, dismantle, or take over for the government any broadcasting station in the country.

Such pledges of non-partisanship, made on all sides and mutually respected, will aid the President in building and keeping a united American sentiment for staying out of the war. Let the so-called neutrality act be repealed. Let American ships and American citizens be prohibited from going into the war zones. Let us have actual neutrality, and actual non-partisanship.

By such means the torch of freedom can be kept alight in the United States, at least. Then we can be free to work out the still unsolved problems of rebuilding a permanent prosperity for our own people. To restore prosperity and maintain the freedom of men is the best thing we can do for the world and for democracy. That is our great moral opportunity. If we are ed into war, prosperity, freedom and democracy alike will be "gone with the wind."

It will not be hard to be neutral, if we have the genuine will to do it.

Only misguided leadership and a deceived and misled people can turn our steps down the bloody road we so deeply dread.—From Farm Journal and Farmer's Wife.
