GET OUT AND VOTE SATURDAY

SATURDAY the voters in School District 26 will pass on the $36,000 school bond issue for the second time. This was made necessary when the bond attorneys decided that the first notice of the election had not been properly worded.

Our thought in mentioning it here is to make it clear that the Board of Directors are not asking that we vote another or additional $36,000 but that we re-vote the original amount, the notice this time being in accordance with the interpretation of the law by the bond attorneys.

This matter is of such vital importance that we should all make it a point to get at least one person in addition to ourselves to go to the polls at the Nyssa school Saturday and vote. If you cannot remember it any other way, paste this editorial in your hat—BUT GET OUT AND VOTE SATURDAY!

A TRIBUTE TO SPORTSMANSHIP

THE football season for the Nyssa High school came to a close last Saturday, but we are sure that the fans (and they are not confined to the high school students, either) of this fine group of young men feel mighty proud of the fine record that has marked their season. Only thirteen points were scored against them in a conference of teams that in most cases outweighed them by a good many pounds.

But aside from all this goes the tribute that we feel is paramount in the field of any endeavor, the tribute to fine sportsmanship. These lads played every game hard, but in no instance did we see (and we saw all the games) anything that could be called unsportsmanlike.

Some of the "Bulldog" players played their last game, and it gave us a bit of a heart twinge as we watched them trudge off the field, knowing that they had appeared for the last time in the colors of their high school. But to them must come the feeling of a game well played, played with the best they had in them.

And to Coaches John Young and Bob Parke should go no small amount of credit for bringing their charges along through the season with very few injuries and the inculcation of such a fine spirit of sportsmanship.

ROLL CALLS—HERE AND THERE

WE, in the United States, are or should be by this time, answering the roll call that is nation-wide—not the roll call of drums of war, but the roll call of helping our neighbors in distress—the annual Red Cross Roll Call.

The Red Cross is a cause that deserves the support of every person who can possibly afford to lend their financial aid—for one of the main purposes of the Red Cross is to help in the time of disaster—from whatever the cause. We venture to say that many a person has given to the Red Cross only to have his or her money returned to them many times over when disaster hit in their locality.

Give what you can—and remember these Red Cross workers who call at your home for your enrollment are volunteer workers—they are doing this work for nothing, and in a lot of cases are taking money out of their own pocket to pay for transportation and other incidentals. These workers deserve every courtesy and consideration, let us all help.

We should consider ourselves lucky that we are answering a Red Cross roll call in the United States and not the roll call of war drums in Europe!

A KINDLY—AND TIMELY THOUGHT

ONE of our neighbor farmers stopped us on the street the other day and asked that we write an editorial on a subject that is hard to handle—so if we seem to stumble onto someones' toes, remember we warned you.

This farmer is the father of a fine family, he loves his children and we are sure that is what prompted him to ask us to bring this thought to our readers.

This kindly father and neighbor asked if we would bring to the attention of all parents the necessity of teaching their children the dangers of crossing streets in the middle of city blocks—dashing from between parked cars into flowing traffic. This habit is terribly dangerous at all times, but is especially so now, with so many sugar beet trucks going through our streets.

It is a matter to take the serious consideration of every parent, it will take but little time to explain to our children the dangers of such practices.

It may not be a bad idea for us oldsters to set an example to our younger people by refraining from the practice ourselves—it takes only a minute longer to walk to the corner and cross the street at the regular pedestrian crossings.

Perhaps our city police could be a big factor in educating our children of the danger they are placing themselves in when they run out into the street from between parked cars.

In any event we want to thank this father for bringing this to our minds, and we hope when he reads this editorial that he will know that his efforts have not been in vain.

COW HOLLOW
By The Happy Farmer

Farming is pretty well over in Cow Hollow for this year and most of the farmers are settled down to the business of preparing for the winter. Russell Howell is doubling the size of his house. Mort Wixon is building a porch onto his house. George Gabriel has built a chicken house. Eliza Niccum is finishing up a small fruit cellar. Clarence Niccum is preparing to move his house over a basement. Chuck Share has plans made to drill a well right away. Dale Limbaugh and Frank Parker have both altered their fences so as not to have to drive their stock to water.

Most everyone is expecting and doing something toward meeting a long, hard winter.

Dude Parker has more stock than anyone else in Cow Hollow and hasn't raised enough feed for them. He has been trading and hustling feed and now he says that he wants to get it hauled home before it gets snowed in.

There was a band of sheep brought in on Frank Parker's place Tuesday.

They have been feeding just over the hill in Sunset Valley for some time, but now they will feed on down Cow Hollow. We are glad to see a band of sheep come down farm.

The Hollow. Where the sheep feed they leave quite a welcome amount of manure. They eat off alfalfa which in some cases would have to be removed before next year's crop and last but not least, when the sheepman moves away, he leaves quite a substantial little check, too.

Doc Raffington sold a hundred tons of hay last week, to be chopped and hauled out. With that, and Chet Sage's hay sold, it only leaves around another hundred tons to be sold in the Hollow.

Most every farmer one meets asks where he can buy some grain for chickens or hogs. In spite of the fact that this is new land, still there wasn't enough grain raised for our own use this year.

Us Cow Hollowites would like to see someone buy some new machines to thresh clover. We have been having a time trying to find someone to do the Hollow's threshing. The last machine man we talked to says "I have turned down over three hundred acres during the last week for I just can't get to it." Then he adds, "But if you don't get someone to thresh it before I can get to it, I'll thresh it for you, but I can't get to it for at least two weeks if the weather stays good."
