Lights in Poultry House Will Result in Greater Egg Profits

Lighting such as this maintains egg production when prices are highest.

By IRA MILLER, Rural Electrification Bureau

WILL the egg production of your flock decline sharply with the coming of winter? Or will there be little or no decrease in the number of eggs you obtain? Assuming, of course, that your hens are free of disease, the answer will depend almost entirely upon whether or not your poultry house is wired for electricity.

What has electricity to do with maintaining the laying efficiency of your hens? In the first place, they require thirteen to fifteen hours of light per day to consume sufficient food to lay regularly. When days are short—September to April—there is only enough natural light to permit them to eat little more than is necessary to keep up their body weight. As a result, the production of eggs is greatly decreased just when prices are highest.

By using electric lights to artificially increase the working day and thus give your hens a normal amount of time to exercise and eat, their egg production can be kept approximately uniform throughout the winter.

Although standard light bulbs are commonly used for poultry house illumination, ultra-violet lamps have become increasingly more popular during the past several years. These also furnish an invisible light that supplies the necessary quantities of Vitamin D—an essential to strong, healthy birds and to more eggs with a greater percentage of hatchability and fertility.

A second major use of electricity in maintaining the winter laying efficiency of your flock is for water warmers. As an egg is about two-thirds water, much if not all of the benefits of electric lights will be lost if your hens are not provided with an adequate and regular supply of water at the proper temperature—a minimum of approximately 50 degrees. The safest and most convenient method of warming the water is with electrical heaters, the immersion type with thermostat control being preferred because of its ease of handling and freedom from attention.

What will poultry lights and water warmers cost you? Excluding wiring, and with power at five cents per kilowatt-hour, the lights will vary from 1/10 to 3/10 cents per bird per month, depending on the schedule you use. Water warmers, at the same rate, will cost from one to five cents each per day, the average being nearer the lower figure. When used from about September 1 to April 1, lights and water warmers will give you a net gain in income of 25 to 50 cents per hen per year—frequently more.

Full information on the wiring and lighting of poultry houses can be obtained from your state college or university, or from the equipment manufacturers.

Health Club Examinations

Nearly one hundred and ten members of Malheur County 4-H Club Health Clubs have received their physical examinations during the past week.

Mrs. Geraldine Betts, County Health Nurse, has been cooperating in conducting these examinations and has arranged for physicians to give complete physical check-ups on the condition of each member of the various clubs.

Clubs which have already been examined include the Adrian senate. Practically every member of Health Club led by Walter McPartland, Grove Club led by Mrs. Verna Warthen, Jefferson Club led by Kingman Kolony 4-H Health Club by Mrs. Nannie Oakes, and the led by Mrs. Joy McPartland.

The two Willowcreek clubs led by Mrs. Victoria Schweizer and Miss Lola Martin will have their examinations early next week.

Parents have been invited to be present during the examinations so any defects or irregularities could be explained to them by the physician doing the examining.

According to Mrs. Betts, poor teeth are by far the most prevalent defect with defective tonsils second in importance, and nutritional disorders rating third in defects noted.

Correction of defects discovered will form the basis of the 4-H Health club project for the balance of the year with Mrs. Betts doing follow-up work in the home to help in getting corrections made.

The Profits Go To Relief

Residents of Oregon spent a total of $9,800,515.93 for alcoholic liquors during the year ending June 30, last, according to the annual report of the Oregon Liquor Control commission. That amount represented an increase of $303,588.83 over the business of the state's liquor monopoly during the previous year.

The increase is accounted for by higher liquor prices rather than a larger volume of business. Net revenues of the liquor commission for the year amounted to $2,864,861.03.

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

A. L. LINDBECK, State Capitol News Bureau

SALEM—In order to attract business back to the streams of Oregon, the state land board this week decided to reduce sand and gravel royalties from ten to eight cents a cubic yard. Lewis Griffith, clerk of the board, explained, that because of the high royalty charge many companies have been buying land and opening up gravel pits from which no royalty is levied by the state.

State Parks Attract

Oregon's state park system lured a total of 1,715,357 visitors into the great outdoors during 1939, according to figures just released by the state highway department. Checkers employed in the parks counted a total of 557,054 automobiles during the year. Coast parks, particularly those in Lincoln county within easy access of the residents of Portland and the populous Willamette valley, entertained the most visitors. Use of state parks by the public has almost trebled in the past two years, highway department records show.

Income Down—Taxes Up

While the operating incomes of Oregon utilities are on the decline taxes paid by these same utilities are on the increase, it was revealed in a report filed with Governor Sprague this week by the public utilities commission. This report shows that gross revenues of Oregon utilities declined from $77,126,916 in 1937 to $73,138,108 in 1938. In the same years taxes paid by the utilities increased from $8,060,239 to $8,630,726. The greatest decrease in revenues was shown by electric railroads and water utilities. This is accounted for by abandonment of many electric lines and the conversion of water utilities to public ownership.

Tourists Leave Money

Oregon motorists, including visitors temporarily touring the state, contributed $12,958,499 in gasoline taxes to the coffers of the state during 1939, according to figures compiled by Secretary of State Snell. This was an increase of $760,280 over the 1938 gasoline tax receipts. According to Snell's figures the gasoline taxes covered purchases of 241,169,975 gallons of gasoline representing 2,758,984,514 miles of travel.

"Social Clubs" Are Problem

So-called social clubs in which "members" gather to mix and imbibe drinks constitute the greatest problem in Oregon's attempt to regulate the sale and use of hard liquors, according to the report of the Oregon Liquor Control commission. Under existing laws the commission has no jurisdiction over these clubs and is urging support of the "club control bill" passed by the 1939 legislature but sidetracked to the 1940 election through the referendum.

Drunk Driving Tops List Of Revocations

A total of 2676 motorists have had their drivers' licenses revoked in this state since the safety responsibility act was made operative in July, 1935, it was revealed this week by Secretary of State Snell. Driving while drunk account d for 2498 of these revocations.

School Fund To Benefit

The State Land Board has decided to accept an offer from the U. S. Biological Survey of $2 an acre for school lands located within the Hard Mountain antelope refuge in Lake county. The 14,165 acres involved in the deal will yield the school fund $28,330 which the Board expects to invest in bonds or first mortgage loans at a substantial increase over the three cents per acre now received for the use of this land for grazing purposes.

Oregon Exhibit Up To Board

An emergency appropriation to finance Oregon's participation in the San Francisco fair this year is entirely up to the State Emergency Board according to Attorney General Van Winkle. The attorney general in an opinion to Governor Sprague this week ruled that it was entirely within the authority of the Emergency Board to determine whether the situation represented an emergency justifying the expenditure of state funds.
