TO MR. AND MRS. COULTER ON A GOLDEN WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Fifty long, hard years have fled, Since the day on which we wed Years of toiling and of hardships, Have we seen, pass o'er our head.

We have trod this path together, Sometimes rough as ocean wave, But we've traveled on and onward, Trying always to be brave.

Many times our loads were lifted, Many times joy spread its ray, So with love and hope together, Time has swept us on its way.

Many change too we've witnessed, As we take a backward look, At the little old sod shanties, On the claims, which then we took.

Farms have come which once was prairie, Folks have flocked from far and near, Highways too where once were cow-trails, Made by buffalo, antelope or deer.

Just one little old postoffice, In a farmhouse by the way There we got our news and letters, On that one red letter day.

Now the world news comes right to us, Through the radios galore, Or we talk with friends and neighbors, Thats what telephones are for.

Automobiles too are waiting, If we wish to take a ride, Or if perchance we're in a hurry, In an airplane we'd risk a glide.

Poor old Dobbin's been supplanted, By the tractors grand and new, So he's like a lot of people, Nothing much for him to do.

Yes we've seen a lot of changes, Times of plenty, time of need, Times of storms and times of danger, Times when hearts would ache and bleed.

But the hand of God's been guiding Through this ever changing life, And we've trusted in his mercy, Through the times of peace and strife.

Trusted, till when he does call us, To the greatest change of all, We will follow just as surely, Knowing well we cannot fall.

One of the best known financial houses of Wall street is making an investigation of the possibilities of a proposed new industry to use Bonneville power. If the survey is satisfactory the house will put up the money for the enterprise and the operation might be located anywhere on the west side of the Cascade range, a site on tidewater not being essential if there is land transportation.

Administration's proposed farm program based on subsidies has failed to provide parity prices, and the Okanogan county Pomona Grange, Washington, has petitioned congress via Rep. Charles H. Leavy, for cost of production to be paid farmers for domestically consumed portion of their products. The Grange also protests against the president extending the national park program in Washington. By executive order three weeks ago the president en-

There is a proposal to expand Crater lake park to include Diamond lake, but this means a row between the forest service and park service (one under department of agriculture, other under department of interior) and disagreement among three Oregon communities. Similar plan proposed by the late Nick Sinnott, congressman, and Senator McNary 21 years ago was abandoned because of the dissensions.

As predicted in this column several months ago, the president would cut appropriations for CCC camps. Unless congress restores the cut (not expected), about 200 camps must be dropped and this means elimination of approximately five camps in Washington and five in Oregon. What is alarming various communities in the Pacific northwest is that their particular camps will be eliminated, and telegrams of protest are arriving daily. These camps have left millions of dollars in the two states and enrollees have performed valuable services.

Rep. Walter M. Pierce has warned that trade treaty policy will be defeated unless most favored nation clause is eliminated, excise taxes are not tampered with, and treaties must be ratified by the senate. Practically every member west of the Mississippi river is opposed to some features of the existing law.
