HER FIFTH BIRTHDAY

Marzene Hollenberg

To most people a birthday is an annual affair that occurs with increasing monotony as the years increase, but to Marzene Hollenberg, who will be twenty years old on next Thursday, a birthday anniversary is still a novelty, for next Thursday will be February 29th, the fifth one since Marzene was born.

Mrs. Marzene is the eldest daughter of School Superintendent Leo Hollenberg and Mrs. Hollenberg and was born in Corvallis, Oregon in 1920. She attended the first grade of school at North Powder and the following year came with her parents to Nyssa where Mr. Hollenberg has been the leader in school work since.

Marzene graduated from Nyssa High with the class of 1938 and the following year attended Eastern Oregon College at La Grande. This year she remained at home and is employed at the First National bank.

May her birthday anniversaries be many and the years between happy ones.

CIVIC CLUB MEETS
The Wednesday afternoon meeting of the Nyssa Civic Club at the Parish hall attracted an unusually large number of interested ladies who enjoyed the program planned by the library committee of which Mrs. C. C. Hunt is chairman.

Mrs. Dessa Hofstetter, county librarian of Ontario, spoke on the accomplishments of the library work in the county and particularly in this area, its growth and its future aims.

The nominating committee was elected to choose officers for the coming year and Mr. H. R. Sherwood, Mrs. William E. Schreman and Mrs. Carlos Buchner will compose the committee.

Tea service was in charge of the library committee.

ODD FELLOWS PARTY
On Wednesday evening the last of a winters series of card parties given by the Odd Fellows was held at the Legion hall.

After the final count of scores the prizes for highest scores for the winter went to Mrs. Ethel Crawford for contract, to Mrs. Harold L. Fletcher for auction and to Roy Pounds for pinocchio.

Memories Of An Old Timer

When we came here, there was no Ontario, only the Multnomah hotel, a grocery store and three or four houses and Nampa hadn't been thought of.

Most of us worked in the winter at the mines at Rock Bar. Unless we had enough cattle and horses to make a living, we had to work in the mines to live. It wasn't easy to make it in those days.

Still the old time cattlemen were big-hearted. Range horses broke all around us were worth from $45 to $50, cattle were worth the same. Yet if old Seven-up Smith or John Devine or any old time stock man came along and saw a lot of kids around and knew you were broke, they would say, 'Help yourself to anything with my iron on it—only don't leave it out to waste. When that's gone, get another one.'

In those days no one was considered a cattlemen unless he owned 5000 head, and horses were counted by the thousands.

I knew John Devine and Col. Todhunter. They used to come in to Ontario with two and three thousand steers. They usually had Mexican riders, with fine outfits, silver mounted bits and splendid saddles, and perhaps the most magnificent saddle horses in the world.

There was a race track at the Alvord, and the saddle horses were bred in with the race stock. Devine, who came from California to the Alvord, was as dark as a Spaniard. Col. Todhunter was short and heavy set and rode in a buckboard made specially for him.

Judge G. L. King was the telegrapher and station agent and later secretary of the Owyhee Ditch company.

Jo Monahan rode for years for Malloys. She had quite a bunch of cattle on the range. No one guessed that she was a woman. I remember once I was pulling up a particularly bad stretch of road on Succor creek, when the coils I was driving spied something off in the sagebrush. It was Jo Monahan, who had ducked off the road into the brush when she saw someone coming.

I saw Henry Miller at his Harper ranch. He owned thousands of acres from Harney valley to Sacramento valley. At the Harper ranch big hay crews were busy every year on the 4000 acres of alfalfa. Miller owned all the cattle and range country, and had cowboys take up all sorts of government claims for him. But Charley Jackson kept his deed instead of giving it to the company. After that other buckaroos with patents did the same thing, and that's the way settlers came in in the early days about Harper.

Around Jordan Valley, Jake Schas, Billy Beers, Con Shea and Sid Knight ran cattle all over this country—but the winter of 1894-85 cut their cattle in two or worse than that.

The deer used to come out of the mountains when the snow got deep and winter on the Snake River flats. Big Bend was a white sage flat. Lots of antelope wintered there and went on into the high hills in the summer. One time when my son George was a boy, we saw antelope over a ridge way up the Owyhee.

'Hold on!' I said, 'Horses! Horses, no,' said George. 'They're antelope!' And such they proved to be.

And so perfect in the making, With cleanliness supreme, And skillful white-clad figures, Make White Satin, the cream.

And we hope the day is dawning, When our land with beets abound, Then the joyful campaign season, Will last the whole year 'round.

PATCH AND CHAT CLUB HAS MEETING
LINCOLN HEIGHTS—The Patch and Chat club met at the Lyle Anderson home Thursday with 33 members present.

Claude Page and Ray Whitsell made a business trip to the coast Thursday, Ray will also visit his mother while there. They expect to be gone a week.

The Jim Hawkins family have recently built a new house in this vicinity. Leste, Fern and George Rookstool

Ray Breithaupt county agent, he, as chairman of the power users of Malheur county, gained a victory before the Oregon Utility commission.

I personally saw and heard an attack of that commission stop Mr. Claggett at the head of the stairs in the city hall in Ontario and compliment him on the precise, concise, and very workable way he had presented the evidence there. They seldom got it that way.

Tom Claggett was a very quiet and reserved person, yet a most able man. He had a most able way of gathering and putting together facts and in this capacity, to my mind, he laid the foundation for the building of the Owyhee dam.

It stirs in me a bitter resentment that he be cast aside with no recognition at all. He did a mighty work in his quiet way. He was one of Malheur county's most able men, and it is not just nor fair that he be cast to the lot of the forgotten man. Let us give honor to T. W. Claggett, the mighty builder.

Yours, C. M. Beaumont. (Editor's Note: A "Forgotten Man" is now on the list of those remembered, thanks to Mr. Beaumont.)

WANTED—A PLACE TO REST
We need a place in Nyssa. When ladies come to town To spend an hour or so, While their men are running 'round.

The men go to the beer bar When their shopping's done, While the misses sit in the car Or else stays on the run.

AN ODE TO THE SUGAR MILL
O, Sugar Mill, so silent now, We miss your friendly hum, Your whistle's blast three times a day, When change in shifts had come.

And then again at Christmas time, It pealed a stroke of cheer, And was the first on New Year's Eve To announce the brand-new year.

Your sparkling lights are blackened out, We miss their mellow glow, And the lacy mists atop your roof, Like mounds of drifting snow.

But in this state of silence, There's one reminder yet, The drying pulp's quaint odor, Abounds, "Lest We Forget".

The fattening herds keep this a-stir, And relish every treat, So let us hope, ere summer comes, It will have turned to meat.

But to your White Satin sugar, We lift a toast of praise, It gives a perfect sweetness, In all the sugar ways.

And so perfect in the making, With cleanliness supreme, And skillful white-clad figures, Make White Satin, the cream.

And we hope the day is dawning, When our land with beets abound, Then the joyful campaign season, Will last the whole year 'round.
