

Ye Snooper's Column

Things About Nyssa's Shops

Quickly has summer come. Almost over night the lush green of wild grasses and the gay blossoms of early spring have dried, to a yellowed crispness. Feeding flocks are fast moving to the uplands where summer is yet in the offing. New hay is in the stack and young birds are trying their own wings, and boys wend their way to the swimming hole by the bridge.

Here in the United States our minds are on the harvest and our hopes tied up in the abundance of the season's yield. While in Europe desperate peoples fight for their national existence and the right to live in liberty. Let us here in our land be not so engrossed with our own harvest that we give no heed to the rumbling threats of foreign instigated strife within our own United States boundaries.

It has long been an enigma to us why so many folks object to a large standing army. In the days of depression it has seemed so much a wiser course to put the unemployed youth of the land in constructive military training where they may learn discipline and a responsibility to their country and community and receive a monthly wage. Rather to be let roam aimlessly, become prey to every subversive agitator and be handed out a pittance in the name of relief, without constructive effort on their part. Better an army of uniformed and trained men on the military payrolls of Uncle Sam than a horde of ragged loafers and wanderers on a government dole. Both are paid from the taxpayers' pockets. What if all the armament is obsolete at the end of 10 years and must be scrapped. At least it can be melted down and be recast. And that gives work again. Better the remodeling of scrapped war guns every decade than the scrapping of a generation of young men till their ambition is gone and their spirit passed remodeling. Better trained men in Uncle Sam's fighting forces who have learned to honor and love their land and to know their own responsibility towards its continued well being than ever increasing taxes for the housing of the flopsam in penitentiary, reform schools and insane asylums. The Civilian Conservation Corps has been a step in the right direction and only the blind will refuse to admit that these lads given the opportunity of self-development in these camps have proven the project worth its cost. Much can be done by a standing army other than on the parade grounds in times of peace. Road building and fire control on government lands, reforestation, are but a few. Better a son in the uniform of his country than a shabby and shaggy wanderer going nowhere atop a freight train.

And we did think lately of a tale we did read of the poorer classes of Japan where every morsel of food must be utilized if the people are to survive. A poor man's rations in this country would be a feast to them. And the writer in pointing out their abject poverty and utter the hopelessness of the masses to improve their condition did tell of the absence of dogs in the country side. No little boy or girl could afford the luxury of a pet in that country, and no father returning home from work could ever know the joy of his happy son racing with a merry pooch to greet him. Dogs must be for the rich, such a luxury feed they are. And we did think how to them there would seem to be many millionaires in this land so thick are the canines. Some of the pooches seem to be on the leanish side as if pickin's were none too good but they do survive and seemingly lead a fairly contented existence.

Now Ves Goshert didst chide us the week past and say that in these columns he hadst not yet seen any mention of the fine bargains they didst have at his place of business. That no other place of like business canst undersell him and that at all times he doest have the very latest in stamps, stamped post cards, envelopes and that his crew doest ever strive to give extra good service with a smile. And we'll say that they do.

One of the things that didst remind us that summer was well on its way wast the display of deep red cherries on the vegetable stand Barney Wilson's grocery store. Full ripe and of a delicious sweetness they were as well. Two things not always found in the first fruits of the season.

And now with the harvest so close at hand every farmer must give heed to equipment, for no time can be spared when the harvest day is at hand to replace out worn parts and to wait for the delivery of a new motor, and none need be lost if a trip be paid to the Nyssa Implement shop at Goode avenue near Second where they do carry tops in both new and good used farm equipment.

And when quick trips to town and market place will be a necessity as well it is a wise John and his lady that sees to it that all the tires on the family motor coach and four are in the best of perking order. And sure they will be if they are those U. S. tires that the Thompson Oil company doest traffic in. And it is a good turn if they have on used tires as well.

But with the summer and the harvest comes also the days of vacation. Relatives from cities and towns in distant places, an old friend or sister Susie's fiancée's sister, or great Aunt Nell out for a summer airing. Wanted or not so welcome they will be bound to drop in and tis then that one doest wish to look their best and with out time to spend perking up last summer's slacks for John and thine own company's best. But a trip to the Nyssa Cleaners of the Mains Cleaners here in Nyssa and a tip-top job in renewing will be the result and all the summer through thou wilt be able to look thy best and put the family's best foot forward when company drops in.

Didst look forward all winter to the time when a new screen porch wouldst grace the family manse and lend shade and comfort to those who dwell therein and now with things as they are the monies saved for it have had to go for other things. Pret not nor get a wrinkle in thy brow from the worry of it. A trip to the Nyssa Lumber company where they will explain to thee how easy it is to have one the A. B. C. way and all thy frowns will turn to smiles and ere thou doest know it the new addition will be made.

Much has been said or late for and against the Milk Board. We know not much of it except that by state laws the grade of milk has come far in purity and lack of adulteration since the days when the milk man used to pull up at the front gate, the precious liquid stored in two or three five-gallon cans from which he poured the housewife's need and then gave each youngster on the block a drink from the lid ere it was replaced atop the can again. Nothing was said about cream content, nor bacteria count to the square inch, nor disease tested cows. If the milk got a bit blue, one changed dairymen, and if typhoid came along one got it or didn't. And who ever heard of a cow having consumption? Well its all changed now, thanks to state and federal pure food regulation and here at Nyssa we have two fine dairies that live up to the demands of the health board in producing clean, disease-free, rich-in-cream-content milk, delivered at the door each night and morning in sanitized and sealed bottles. Both the Gate City Dairy and Shelton's Dairy serve the best and only the best of approved milk in this Nyssa town.

And if the production and selling of milk and milk products have been regulated to safeguard the health of the nation it has nothing on the meat industry. For it was among the first in which the government took a hand to provide its eating population fresh and non-tainted animal flesh. And when one buys their meats from the Nyssa Packing here in Nyssa they are sure of government inspected and approved animal products. Tis a tasty weiner they do vend there that turns to a first-class hot dog when dunked for a time in boiling water and then dabbed with a bit of mustard and plunked in between slices of fresh bread.

And if it is fresh bread and cakes or baked sweets that are on thy "must get" list then pay a visit to the McClures Bakery and thy wants will be filled in no time at labor and money saving prices as well. Shop in Nyssa with Journal advertisers and ye wilt not waste thy time and thy gas going farther.
