THE HAPPY FARMER VIEWS "THE BREAK"

COW HOLLOW—Everybody here in Cow Hollow is nervous as to when the water will be in again. We all have been so busy and still are, getting all the hay down and up again, or getting it stacked. All of Cow Hollow's hay will be in the stack when the water comes unless possibly Jim Trummel's. His accident putting him in the hospital, has delayed his work badly. Jim had some of his hay in the shock and some more cut when he got hurt. Elza Niccum went over and raked and bunched that which was in the swath.

Jim got out of the hospital Sunday. He has never gone home yet, as he can't wait on himself although he gets around on crutches fair. He has been staying with neighbors.

We hear all kinds of reports as to when the water will be back in the ditch. There is always an optimist who hears of the huge amount of machinery working there and hopes that it will work miracles in a few days.

Then there is the pessimist who goes up there and sees all that mountain of dirt and rock and comes back all blueed and thinking only a miracle could get all that out in less than 30 days.

The wind Friday blew our hay crews out of our fields so Homer Cates took Doc, Raffington, Geo. Gabriel and Clarence Niccum up to see how they were coming along with the canal repair job.

To the best of our count there were eight bulldozers (and most of them huge monsters) and five carryalls working up there. All were crawler type machines. They were so thick they were just crawling around there like ants.

Those huge bulldozers back up on a hillside and start down with a whole hillside moving before them. Up on top in the cut a huge carry-all comes around, drops down his lower jaw and a bulldozer gets behind to push and he will take out a nice little bite of 12 or 15 yards of rock and dirt and crawl off with it while the bulldozer pushes up another load for the next one.

You can't hear yourself think out there. They drove us back while they put off a huge blast of maybe a hundred individual shots. We felt the earth tremble under our feet and saw the dirt go up but couldn't hear a thing above the roar of those huge motors roaring around there.

Our crops are taking it much better than we all feared they could. Doc Raffington's spuds still look fine; Geo. Gabriel thinks his barley would make fair if he never got any more water on it. Chet Sage's corn is something to be proud of. Elza Niccum's Alsac clover has already made a crop. Frank Parker seeded some alfalfa seed alone and had just got it wet when the water went off. If we get water soon it won't be hurt much. Some alfalfa that was seeded early and not watered at all is still doing fine. Very few crops will be a total loss.

We have made out fine about stock water. Wednesday Elza Niccum was about out of stock water.

When the water does come on everybody will want every inch of water they can get. We fear loading the canal too fast may cause another break which would be disastrous.
