an outside well.

So now we can continue to haul water in a can or barrel and strain it through a rag and drink it hot or cold until we can get time to dig and complete a system and hook up an inside hand pump. Someone else knows how to make contracts stick.

That still will be fine. Even along toward spring when the cistern goes dry we possibly still can find those rusty barrels and haul water from a neighbor who has a well and dump it into the cistern.

The old open water bucket on the water stand ain't too sanitary no way.

The "old swimming hole" has been quite popular lately. The kiddies have sure enjoyed them and come of the kiddies are not too small either. Watermelon rinds have begun to appear on the banks of some of the most popular swimming holes now.

COW HOLLOW
By The Happy Farmer

Haying is still the principle industry in Cow Hollow. Unless it is buying cars.

A few weeks ago Homer Cates drove his "Model A" into town and came home with a big fine "V-8".

Last week Mort Wixon drove into Cow Hollow in a "spanking new" Dodge.

Last Friday along in the night Sessions came home in a shining new "V-8 coupe" (new to him at least).

This haying is hard work but after all it is quite simple. But this new car stuff. Well that is one thing we haven't learned how to do.

Mort Wixon is living down in California now. They say money grows on trees down there (never been there) and Sessions has a good job at the sugar mill. But when we come home late at night we are still herding the same old "heap" and it takes a long time to explain what all was wrong with it.

The lettuce excitement has quieted down in Cow Hollow now with only one (Doc Raffington) getting his lettuce planted, out of the five in Cow Hollow that got his ground ready for lettuce.

The contracts called for the lettuce to be in the ground ready to be watered by Aug. 5. This quite popular now times for contracts and "treaties" to "not be worth the paper it is written on". But seems as the lettuce contractor had a way of making his contracts stick. Altho Jim Trimmis did have his ground ready and they did promise to come out on Wednesday (almost a week before the contract expired) and plant his ground. Guess his patch was too small for to make a special trip for. It had only taken Jim about a week to get it in first class condition and it possibly would of taken them two hours to of made the trip out besides planting time.

The well driller that brought his drill out to Frank Packer's last week had lined up about six farmers that expected to use their S. F. A. Sanitary Grains to buy casing and pipe for their wells.

It seems that some one must of thrown a "monkey wrench" into the cog wheels or at least a cog must of slipped somewhere. Those Grains called for the water to be "on tap" in the kitchen. (Sanitary and very nice). Not to make a pay-
