COW HOLLOW

By The Happy Farmer

At this time of year corn is sort of in the limelight.

Cow Hollow's attention is called to one of the greatest tragedies of corn raising.

Early last spring some one put up for sale at the auction sale some hybrid corn for seed.

It looked fine having big long ears which showed signs of being tightly packed on the ear. Just the kind of ear we have always tried to pick out of the crib for seed.

We don't know if this man sold this corn just because he saw a chance to get a fancy price or whether he sold it through ignorance. We hope the latter.

There was a good supply of this corn put up in convenient 50 lb. bags and sold cheap at 2c per lb. It went like hot cakes.

But the people that bought this corn for seed had not listened to our county agent, our local paper nor any informed farmer or dealer who knew about hybrid corn.

Any man, newspaper, or farm magazine that is informed on hybrid corn will tell you to plant hybrid seed—but do not plant what you raise from it again the next year for you are liable to get anything. Usually nothing.

Those that bought and planted this corn, tended it all summer, had all that work and lost the use of the ground and what they have looks like a cross between pop corn and some kind of flint.

The yield is practically nothing and the quality the same.

Elza Niccum and Fred La Shouse planted 50 pounds of hybrid corn. It was raised in this locality and bought through a reliable dealer.

The 50 pounds did not quite finish the field. Elza had some seed corn that he had purchased from the 4-H club boys over by Fruitland that had captured the highest prize an dthen a fine prize at Chicago. It was fine "open pollinated" seed corn.

They finished planting the field with the 4H club seed and both made good corn. The whole field was tended alike. In fact, until fall you could not tell where the yield was any different.

The hybrid seed was of the 120 day variety and was about two weeks later and two feet taller than the 4-H seed.

They gathered two rows of Hybrid corn and weighed it, selling it to a neighbor. Fred figured the length of the rows and it will make 80 bushels per acre.

"Yes it will make twenty bushels per acre more," answered Fred. When asked if it would make 20 per cent more than the Twin Falls, Idaho paper there were 32 varieties of hybrid corn planted in Twin Falls county this year. Of so many varieties there are bound to be some that are not so good in this country.

Our job is through elimination to pick out 3 or four varieties that are adapted to our soil and climate.

Paul Ransom lost a milk cow as toll to pheasant hunters. That is the price we sometimes have to pay for furnishing hunting grounds for some of these so-called sportsmen.

Elmer Cloninger is about to get his place fenced. He now has a live fence between him and Roy Rookstool, Paul Ransom, John Reffett, Clarence Niccum, George Gabriel and Frank Parker. He still has to fence between him and the road.

Guess his place touches more neighbors than any one else in the county.

"I'll be glad when I get some fence that someone else has an interest in so I can't take it up and move it.

Said Elza Niccum the other day while taking up some fence to move some place else to pasture off some feed.

Doc Raffington, Mort Wixon and Bill Parker have sold all their surplus hay and a chopper is chopping it. The buyers are hauling it to Boise valley as fast as it is chopped.

Chuck Share bought five calves the other day. He has lots of feed so why not use it?

Betty Niccum is sure glad to be home again. The doctor says that she will have to be in bed at least 30 days let but there is no place like home.

A well drill went up the hollow Monday. Presumably to Sam Cates. Sam has been trying to get a drill for some time.
