Things About Nyssa's Shops

Whether we like it or not, these United States seem to be heading for the good old European round up where they are lashing and branding the male youth of the world. In fact, we hear there is betting that ere spring is well begun this nation will be actually at war and men on the move to unannounced destination. Great ships stealthily slipping unsung and unannounced for some mysterious unknown foreign port, there to line up and shoot to kill or be shot. It is hell at its worst.

And yet it seems that it must be, Hitler must not win. He and his cohorts and legion must not emerge from this conflict victorious. In that case never again in this generation or the next would our country know freedom, peace and security, for to keep those devastating hordes from out of our national boundaries would require military law, an ever increasing program against all foreign attack. To say nothing of the prostration of our financial and economic scheme.

Not long after the last Armistice we were told by an American officer who was with the mopping up squads of the A.E.F. in France and Belgium and was also in Germany at the close of fighting, that there was no doubt in his mind had the Central Powers won then, the United States would have been the next to be attacked.

If it were so then, under a ruler who had family ties and many memories of early friendliness with England's royal family, what would it be now under a dictator who has no memories of early friendship nor of a happy childhood.

Like it or not we seem to be in that well-known position between his Satanic Majesty and the deep blue sea.

And like it or not, we who do not go, will pay with it by the sweat of our brow until it hurts.

And while we are on this subject, we were astonished during the recent presidential election to hear every so often over the radio that during the last war and the Wilson administration that there had been no favoritism to sons of the wealthy and influential at the time of the draft. Well, maybe not. But we did a bit of a tour in Guam and there knew a twenty-four year old major in the Marines who had not been farther from home than the state college. Then there were two lieutenants just out of prep school at the advance age of twenty-one and twenty-two years. They were nice boys and tripped the light fantastic most delightfully, but they scarcely knew how to keep on their swords during parade. Guam at that time was considered fairly safe and secure.

The first shot of hostilities between the United States and Germany, however, was fired at that wee bit of terra firma in the old Pacific when the crew of the interned Comoran scuttled their ship in Piti bay. With a scratch of the pen by a few powerful men, miles away, men and women who had been friends for many months suddenly became enemies with authority to kill each other on sight. An American nurse who had married an officer was placed in the camp with other prisoners of war and later sent to an internment camp with her husband here in the states. A group of natives from New Guinea who had been taken prisoners from an English ship suddenly became free men again and just that many more mouths for this government to feed until they were sent back to their own land on an American copra boat after the Armistice. And now in those very waters we read of another enemy raider at work.

It almost seems that war is a subconscious and ungovernable urge in the mind of Man, and has no more been controlled than other primitive urges in the being of the homo sapiens. No wonder they often abbreviate that last to "saps."

But war or no war, regardless of whether it is man made or the outgrowth of a Cosmic urge, life goes on. Babies are born, the aged pass on, we eat and sleep and work and play the years through, and little by little this old race does show improvement.

Perhaps that is the reason that some of us live to eat and others eat to live. Be that as it may, those Calavos that they are selling so readily at the Wilson grocery store at Main near Second will stay the purpose either way. Rich in flavor, vitamins and nutrition they are too. If perchance they so far have seemed insipid and tasteless, try a dash of lemon juice and salt sprinkled over them just before they are served or fill the cavity when the seed is removed with a tasty catsup, eschewal oily and heavy dressings.

But it is not just avacadoes that Barney doest have in the fresh vegetable and fruit line. Thou wilt have to see for thy self his variety. Verily, it is too numerous to count here.

And Lucien Wray has taken his inventory and the kinks and creaks in the knee joints resulting there from have been rubbed and limimented away, but the stock is first class and now there are some grand after Christmas buys just waiting for the smart shoppers. And hast seen the pretty selection of lamps in his window at so low a price while they last.

'Tis no mean special that the Main's Cleaners do be putting on this week too. Wilt pay to collect all the winter bedraggled frocks, coats and John's drooping bespattered headgear and tote it to that reliable cleaning establishment for a refurbishing, now that they art offering their annual 342 special.

Too, it does seem that in times of national distress and emergency that the need for amusement and entertainment becomes increased. To forget the worries and heartaches the movies of this era wilt do their part. And here in Nyssa at the Nyssa theatre we have a dandy which provides all the best pictures and cinematics at truly low prices. Oft do we wonder that we can get so much for so little.

'Tis a neat collection of fine lamps that Tom Nordale doest be showing at his furniture show and sales room on Main 'twixt First and Second, and selling them at such a neat price that every home furnisher can afford at least one. Particularly nice are the bed lamps that wilt provide a soft reading light for the person who doest a bit of bed perusing night or early morn.

Just when we didst hear of the fine ice skating at Long Pond and before we couldst unscramble our skates from the stow away shelf, came the thaw and the rain and we didst have all our trouble for naught. But 'twas not altogether in vain for didst decide that a new shelf or two wouldst not come amiss in the family catch all so didst take a quick hop to the Nyssa Lumber and there didst purchase all the things that it takes and in spite of the reputed rise in building cost were not completely financially busted in the deal. But so one always finds at the estimable lumber emporium whether 'tis a modern business block they would erect or a couple of hinges to keep the back screen from falling off the family manse.

And speaking of something new and different in food things has seen and tasted those delicious and lity bitty sausages that Butch doest make these days at the Nyssa Packing company store.

Fine they are toasted on a crackler for the snack platter or fried crisp and brown with a hot cake at breakfast. Then there is some of Butches own particular make of Canadian bacon. If one is lucky enough to get there ere it is all gone.

Hast the rains of the autumn besmeared and bedraggled the fall cahapeau 'til it doest remind thee of a last year's birds nest. Then take a look see at the fine bargains in winter head gear that Earnie Wilson and his co-horts do be offering at the Wilson Dry Goods store. Shapes there are to fit even the most peculiar style of beauty and so low in cost that no one need pray that their worst enemy wilt not meet them when on the way to market. Nice enough for town and party wear every single one of them is. And on the tables of that emporium we also didst spy out some nifty buys in sweaters. Just the thing to perk one up these gloomy dampish days.

And at the Atkeson Frock and Apparel shop are some worthy buys in all manner of wearing things and dress goods at pleasing prices. Hast seen the beautiful undies and negligees on display. Buy now and store away against another gift time and make some maid or her mamma or grandmaw happy.

Shop in Nyssa with Journal advertisers and ye wilt not waste thy time nor thy gas going farther.
