Many Farmers Find It Pays to Grind Their Feed Electrically

Even on small farms, home grinding can cut feed costs by $150 a year.

By IRA MILLER
Farm Electrification Bureau
COMPETENT authorities estimate that the feed bill makes up 50 to 60 per cent of the total cost of livestock production. Therefore, the difference between profit and loss—between a successful and an unsuccessful year—for many farmers depends to a large extent on the economies or lack thereof they practice in the feeding of their poultry, cattle, hogs or sheep. Extended tests in all parts of the country and under widely varying conditions have proved that it pays to grind many grains and roughages for most livestock. Among the advantages are: Reduces feed waste; encourages full feeding; aids digestion; makes it easier to mix feed; allows the use of less palatable feeds; and permits the feeding of roughage in self-feeders.

Although custom grinding by commercial mills still is an important industry, more and more farmers—especially with the ever-increasing availability of electricity—are grinding all their feed at home excepting, perhaps, a relatively small quantity containing ingredients they do not raise themselves. Electrically grinding grain at home results in a cash saving of from $1.25 to $2.25 per ton, as the average custom purchase implements of war abroad, which has been interpreted as authorizing the president to acquire the British navy if England is defeated. While not denying the bill allows this, the president says such an interpretation is foolish and he would not do such a thing.

The attempt to pack the supreme court in 1937 aroused a battle in the senate but that will be child's play compared with the debate on the lease-and-lend bill. Most of the same senators who opposed the court bill are again arrayed against the president. There is greater public interest now because the people can more readily understand what is at stake; this bill hits their pocketbooks and touches directly the lives of 16,000, 000 who are within the draft age. London will continue being bombed and set afire to as the debate drags on in the senate, that much is certain.

WPA workers will be shipped to Clatsop county to build access roads connecting Fort Stevens with Wolf creek highway, with Camp Clatsop, and a 25 mile pipeline for Fort Stevens. On the Washington side of the river are two gone-to-seed forts which will be rehabilitated and access roads constructed for them in Washington. While WPA funds will be sharply curtailed next fiscal year, defense works of WPA in Washington and Oregon will keep the workers busy and there is not likely to be much reduction in the force from present indications.
