COW HOLLOW
By The Happy Farmer

Cow Hollow is certainly getting very much community minded now times. The local ladies club have had a community hall as their goal ever since the club was organized. About a month ago they started out in earnest to do something about it.

The idea went like wild fire and soon got out of their control. A district was organized from Cow Hollow to Mitchell Butte and from the big canal east four or five miles. A few of the club members tried to protest against taking in so large a territory but the crowd was so large and the spirit so strong that the popular vote swamped them.

This week one or two of them took it into their capable hands to try over again to raise funds to build a smaller hall for the local ladies club. Again the idea went over in a big way.

So now construction will start this week on two halls, a large one on Ira Chadd's place about the center of the community from Cow Hollow to Mitchell Butte and a smaller one on Roy Rookstool's place, about the center of the territory, home of Wahine club. As it happens both halls are in the Beautiful Sunset Valley.

The smaller hall is only about two hundred yards down the hill side from the divide between Cow Hollow and Sunset Valley.

A meeting was held at the home of Frank Parker Tuesday night to complete plans and get the labor organized. Never got to attend, an old bachelor with five kiddies to care for and three of them in school, doesn't get his evening's work finished very early.

Cow Hollow creek has made a record, for the four years since the settlers came here, at running water. It has run continuously now for almost a week and at times there has been lots of water in it. No great amount of damage has been done. The deep wash caused by caving has crept up around fifty feet farther into the middle of Dale Limbaugh's field. The water hits the road at the gate at the Mort Wixon place and runs down the road for almost a quarter of a mile. There is no road left there now. When Elza Niccum went to Sam Cate's after his last load of hay he had to go up and around by Dude Parkers house to get around the wash. And if George Gabriel or Clarence Niccum wishes to go any where before they fix their road they will have to walk. There is a nice gully washed across their only outlet to the highway.

Mr. Manley on the Chet Sage place has his car parked out by the highway. He has had a gift bestowed upon him by the creek. A gift of from six to eighteen inches of fine mud on almost a quarter mile of his private road, the only outlet for him to the highway.

A family from Hood River, has moved on the Mort Wixon farm that was vacated by Sessions. He has bought the remaining year of Sessions lease.
