COW HOLLOW

By The Happy Farmer

The community spirit is still running high in at least part of the Cow Hollowites. Russel Howell, and Arch Eastman, Doc Raffington, Frank Parker, Roy Rookstool and Johnnie Hamilton by Tuesday evening had put in almost a week on the basement for the community hall being built on Roy Rookstool's place. George Gabriel, Dude Parker and Clarence Niccum helped on Monday and Tuesday. By Tuesday evening the dirt was almost all out for the basement, half the lumber and almost all of the gravel and cement were on the ground.

The weather is getting most of us all keyed up to get started to tilling the soil.

Elza Niccum has purchased a tractor and plow and is all set to start rolling the dirt. Guess he will start by plowing sixteen acres for his brother, Clarence. Clarence has sixteen acres that slopes pretty steep to the south and has dried faster than some of the other.

Dale Limbaugh, Chuck Share and Elza Niccum bought a grain drill together at a farm sale Tuesday. Grain drills were about as scarce as tractors in Cow Hollow. There was only one in the hollow before they bought this one and it was pretty badly worn out.

Homer Cates and family arrived back in Cow Hollow last week. Most of us never expected them back. Cow Hollow looks good to some people even though they may be half way across the continent away.

Mrs. Clarence Niccum arrived back in Cow Hollow Friday. She has spent several weeks in the Willamette Valley.

Several of us Cow Hollowites that still have some of last year's clover to trash would be glad to see it get dry enough until we can see if we have something or nothing. Frank Parker has his all in the field and a little piled up. At least six of us have clover to trash. Clarence has the smallest amount but it is Lodino and the year before it made pretty good so he hopes to get a little out of it again.
