COW HOLLOW
By The Happy Farmer

Two community houses out here are progressing very nicely. They are both nearing the finish. Both are within a very few days of it but still we don't know which will finish first.

The north one has had fine luck. No skilled labor, just us farmers. Only one minor accident so far. A heavy timber supporting a beam, toppled over and struck Roy Rookstool on the back of his leg just above his heel. Of course we all commented on it. Some one mentioned "Dude hit George over the head with a two-by-four this morning." Another added "and then he screwed his neck around, looked back and asked did it hurt George." And says George "I was afraid to say no, he might take another whack at me."

There is always some fun when the community gets together although we do badly need to be in our own fields.

Farming is not progressing very much in Cow Hollow, owing to the community building, but the spring has been so wet that we are not much behind the rest of the country.

There is still lots of flu in Cow Hollow and that holds up the work some too. The Brittons recently came from Hood River to the Wixon place and now have all had a round of the flu. Been bed fast too. That's one almost sure way to get good and homesick is to move to a new country and in a few days get laid up in bed sick! Can still remember when we came west in early spring of 1915.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Niccum received word from the Shriners hospital in Portland that their daughter Betty was now ready to be released from the hospital, just five weeks after her entrance.

Betty would no doubt of been an invalid all her life had it not been for the Shriners hospital. Of course she is not well yet but she is on her feet again and ready to be released and make room for some one of the others of the thousands of maimed or deformed kiddies that is badly in need of their care.
