SALEM, Ore. — Legislative re-partitionment is out for the current session and in all likelihood for another ten years, or until after Uncle Sam completes another census.

Two such proposals were rejected by the lawmakers this past week.
One of these involved a slight change in the senate set-up. The other involved a major operation in the house appointment.

In the senate a proposal to abolish the Umatilla-Union-Morrow district and transfer that senator to Klamath county met with overwhelming defeat. Senator Cornett of Klamath county in support of his measure pointed out that the four northeastern Oregon counties of Umatilla, Union, Wallowa and Morrow with a combined population of only 55,000 is represented by three senators, whereas his own district comprising Klamath, Deschutes, Lake, Jefferson and Crook counties, with a combined population in excess of 70,000 has only one senate seat. The proposed shuffle had the support of the senate committee on elections and privileges and it was thought that it had the support of a majority of the senate members until the roll call revealed otherwise.

In the House Representative Kinberling's proposal to give each county one House seat and distribute the remaining membership on a population basis met with decisive defeat after that assembly had turned down a proposal by Neuberger of Multnomah county that the entire state be redistributed on a straight-out population basis.

Even if the legislature does pass the bill authorizing construction of another office building it is not likely that the building will be started for several years. Members of the ways and means committee have freely expressed themselves as opposed to any extensive building program during the period of high labor and material prices. These members feel that it would be better to wait until after the boom induced by the defense and war industries program bursts and there is a real need for jobs to take up the slack of unemployment that is expected to follow. This view is said to be shared by members of the State Board of Control who are understood to have agreed to delay the building program pending a real need to provide jobs.

Appropriations so far authorized by the ways and means committee exceed the governor's budget by more than $300,000. This deficit is offset in part by increased revenue estimates but even at that the general fund is confronted with a deficit of more than $350,000 on the basis of authorized expenditures.

The autocratic attitude of federal bureaucrats is beginning to get under the skin of the Oregon legislators. Much of the legislation that is considered at this session is virtually dictated from Washington.
This is especially true of legislation effecting state activities supported in part by federal funds.
When the Washington bureaucrats decide that certain legislation is desirable they pass the word along through their henchmen who tell the representatives of the state to pass it "or else." The latest attempt to dictate to the Oregon lawmakers came this week in a hearing on the proposed new state office building when representatives of the Social Security board told the ways and means committee that Oregon must take steps to provide more adequate quarters for the Unemployment Compensation commission "or else." The "or else" involves a threat to withhold federal funds for administering the jobless insurance fund which are taken away from Oregon employers in the first instance by the Washington bureaucrats and returned to the state only on condition that the terms of the Social Security board be complied with.

This latest threat aroused the resentment of several committeemen members with Senator Pearson declaring himself as opposed to the proposed new building unless the unemployment compensation commission was barred from occupying space in it.
