Jobs Open In British Corps

British Consulates are accepting applications from American citizens for service with the Civilian Technical Corps of the British Government in the various technical classifications shown below. Applicants may be given a practical examination designed to test their qualifications for the position for which they apply. Arrangements have been made for these examinations to be given by the Local Board of U. S. Civil Service Examiners nearest to the point at which the applicant resides. Although the examinations will be conducted under the supervision of representatives of the U. S. Civil Service Commission the standards of the examinations have been set by the Civilian Technical Corps of the British government.

Volunteers accepted for service in the Civilian Technical Corps receive regular salaries ranging from $24.12 per week to $38.65 per week. Clothing, food and lodging, and medical care will be provided free by the British government. Volunteers will have their transportation furnished from their home in the United States to their point of duty in the United Kingdom, or elsewhere. When their employment ends members of the corps with satisfactory records will be re-patriated to their homes at the expense of the British government. Volunteers do not forfeit their American citizenship if accepted for service in the corps. Enrollment in the corps is for a period of three years, or the duration of the war, whichever is the shorter period. National Headquarters of the Selective Service System has authorized draft boards to defer any American enrolled in service abroad with the Civilian Technical Corps. Such Americans will be placed in Class II-B, upon proof that they have been enrolled.

Application blanks and complete information are available at the British Consulate, 1815 Exchange Building, Seattle, Wash., or at the British Consulate, 1007 Lewis Building, Portland, Oregon. Applicants may apply in person or by mail at whichever of these Consulates is nearest their home, according to Ralph Laurence, secretary of the local civil service board.
