The president asked congress for nearly six billion dollars more for lend-lease materials. Lend-lease Administrator Stettinius was given power to approve aid requests; this with other changes is expected to cut from 30 to 15 days the period between receipt of a request and actual authorization for assistance.

Mr. Roosevelt told congress that of the original seven billion appropriated six months ago, all but $730,000,000 is "now moving through the successive stages of allocation, obligation, production and delivery." He said $246,400,000 in materials and $78,170,000 in services has been given the anti-axis nations.

The Defense Supplies Corporation in RFC subsidiary, contracted with Amalgamated Corporation, a U. S. corporation owned by Russia, for the purchase of 100,000,000 of manganese, chromite, asbestos and platinum. The supplies agency arranged to pay Amalgam half of the amount in advance so Russia could use the money to buy war materials here. Treasury Secretary Morgenthau similarly advanced the Soviet Union $10,000,000 on future gold deliveries to the United States.

Navy Protecting Ships
Navy Secretary Knox told the American Legion convention the Navy is using all methods, including convoys to protect vessels of all flags carrying aid to Britain. He said the navy has orders to capture or destroy, by every means at their disposal, axis-controlled submarines or surface raiders in the waters between the U. S. and Iceland.

Neutrality Act Interpretation
The State Department announced that as a result of an interpretation by the attorney general that the "United Kingdom" is only England, Wales, Scotland and North Ireland, American ships may henceforth carry war supplies and passengers to parts of the British Empire not designated by the president to be in combat areas. Under this interpretation American ships are still barred from going to France, Poland, India, the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa.

Navy Expansion Progress
The navy reported it has contracted for 2831 ships, including 332 fighting vessels—every ship authorized under the seven billion dollar program to create "the greatest array of fighting ships under one flag the world has ever seen": 32 battle-ships, 18 aircraft carriers, 91 cruisers, 364 destroyers and 186 submarines, a total fighting fleet of 691 ships.

The navy announced development of a 1900-ton cargo vessel, the Sea Otter, so "light in weight, simple in construction, relatively cheap in both original cost and upkeep . . . (it) will challenge the submarine and destroyers of the world." The vessel is provide a new bridge to the free nations of the world. The vessel is so small it can be built in inland yards in two months. It will carry an anti-aircraft battery, be manned by only a few men, make 12 knots, and be capable of a 5000 mile voyage.

The Maritime Commission took over ships of the Aloca line after striking sailors refused to arbitrate their dispute. The ships will be operated by the commission on their regular runs. The commission announced that on September 1, 1941 ships had been completed of a total 788 being built for all purposes under the commission's auspices. The announcement said 14 ships will be launched September 27 in joint ceremonies on the Atlantic, Pacific and Gulf coasts.

Production
OPM Director Knudsen, speaking on the radio, said "I would like to see every American decide to give . . . an extra hour or an extra half hour or even an extra fifteen minutes to his job from now on . . . If we get the work we'll get the guns . . . The war department reported all 10 machine-gun plants plants required for present estimated needs are now in operation and machine-gun production has increased 460 per cent since August, 1940.

Army Morale
Army Chief of Staff Marshall told the American Legion national convention at Milwaukee there is a difference between "fret discussion" and "destructive measures to promote discontent and destroy confidence in the Army." He said "I submit . . . the impossibility of developing an efficient army if decisions which are purely military in nature are continuously subjected to investigation, cross-examination, debate, ridicule and public discussion by pressure groups, or by individuals with only a superficial knowledge of military matters, or of the actual facts in the particular case . . . Don't tear down what you are striving so hard to build up . . . this country must have the best army in the world."

Defense Housing Priorities
OPM Priorities Director Nelson announced several hundred building materials such as steel, iron, nails, bolts, electrical fixtures, ranges, etc., have been placed on a "defense housing critical list." Priorities on them will be given to builders constructing 200,000 privately-financed housing units in 275 defense areas of the U. S. and territories. Mr. Nelson said the plan will apply to financed homes selling for up to $6000 or renting for not more than $50 a month. First preference will be given to homes under construction on September 1 and for remodeling and rehabilitation work, then for new homes for rent and new homes to be sold.

Oil, Gasoline
Defense Oil coordinator Ickes said restrictions will not be lifted. Mr. Ickes said in the face of a 12 1/2 per cent drop in gasoline stocks compared to this time last year, there is a demand of 11 per cent more than last year. Deliveries to East coast filling stations were 114 per cent lower last week than the week before, and will have to be cut more, he said, unless the pipeline is built from Texas to New Jersey.

30-Day Mine Truce
Defense Mediation Board chairman Davis announced an agreement with the United Mine Workers of America to reopen strike-bound "captive" mines for a period of 30 days beginning September 22. That agreement requires a three-day written notice by either side before operations can be halted. Negotiations on the union shop demand which led to the strike will be resumed September 24. The U. S. Conciliation Service announced settlement of 37 labor disputes.

Priority Unemployment
OPM associate Director Hillman announced employers in Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Pa. have agreed to hire 1335 power-machine operators 200 assistants from among the 3500 workers forced out of employment in those two areas by the silk shortage. Mr. Hillman also announced a broad "model" program of State and local cooperation with OPM to alleviate unemployment in the silk, automobile and rubber industries in New Jersey.

Prices
A. C. Hoffman of the OPA food said farm prices have risen more than 49 per cent since the outbreak of the war and stand now at 97 per cent of parity in terms of things farmers buy. Labor Secretary Perkins said living costs at August 15 this year were 7.5 per cent more than two years ago.

Nurses
Surgeon General Magee announced more than 10,000 nurses are needed for the army nurse corps, including 4000 reserve nurses to care for men still to be inducted this year and an equal number to replace the estimated 40 per cent who will request discharge at the end of their one year enlistments. Information can be obtained from the War Department or the Red Cross, Washington, D. C.

Taxation
Congress passed and sent to the White House the $333,400,000 tax bill for 1941, increasing the number of taxpayers by an estimated 2,275,000 persons. The bill increases corporation surtaxes and lowers present individual exemptions from $2000 to $1500 for married persons and from $800 to $750 for single taxpayers.
