

Ye Snooper's Column

Things About Nyssa's Shops

Came Monday morning, and the first white frost painting the wind shield and the first load of beets on the way to the factory. Somewhere autumn's warm sun has escaped us and winter seems daily more close at hand.

And what wispy things are dreams made of. In them: one flies through the air with the greatest of ease, sans gravitation or other cumbering laws of nature. Just recently we captured a car bandit, tea-ed with the Duke and Duchess of Windsor and drove through a deserted and lovely old time village all in one short minute of the night, only to be rudely awakened and to be warned that we had overstepped and must make haste about the affair of getting breakfast.

Once in the dim past when we still looked for a prince charming to come dashing up to the family homestead aboard a white charger and managed to keep in good standing with a card reader on our block a dream book was a sure guide to our destiny. But someplace in the years we discovered their fallibility and regretfully came to disbelieve in them. Just another illusion shattered and another step along the road to learning that Life must be lived as best we can from day to day, even if it be totally blind to what lies ahead. 'Tis the best plan after all, the years between have taught us, but often we do wish for the faith and hope of those earlier days.

The past week, too, we have marvelled at the healing that Nature will manifest if left alone. A family pooch, the hunter of the pack and the pride and joy of the Lord of the Manor, received an ugly tear on her leg when jumping a wire fence. So much so that the under flap of the wound hung loose from the lower tissue, apparently with no anchor left. We knew that it would be useless to take her to our good friend, Doc Bowman, for a bit of professional stitching as the pooch would pull out his handiwork once she was left alone. So we left her to do the work herself and other than giving her extra tissue building and infection resisting food, did nothing. Regularly she licked and rubbed and sniffed and licked again, kept the proud flesh that seemed ready to set in, down, licked the loosened flap into place and gradually Nature did her part, until now there is but a thin red line to mark the spot and soon new fur will cover this over. Surely the Maker of all has wonderfully made and lovingly cares for all His creatures. It is Man who seems so handy at undoing His work. We wonder at times why our own specie can be so perverse.

For some years past we have from time to time admonished the youthful damozels in our midst for the seeming laxness in this marriage business and the over supply of presentable and marriageable males in the community. In fact, since the days when Ed Dilly over Hunting-ton way and Carl Coad and Omer Adkinson of our own balliwick did wander around loose and forlorn. But the lassies have taken our advice and have done a neat job these past years of depleting the bachelor supply in Malheur county. Some have gone with their choice to other climes and county sides, some new ones have returned with wandering lads to the family firesides here at home but by and large our younger married group has grown by leaps and bounds until scarce a marriageable male is left. There are yet a few confirmed live-alone-and-like-it males but the specie has diminished almost to the vanishing point and it is just as well to have a few about to add spice to the social life of the community. So we will keep our peace at this date and let each lass discover if she can who they are. The better to work her wiles, perhaps. There yet remains a tall and presentable blond among the lot who should long ago have been halter-broken and trained to double harness but we think he must be now well versed in the art of side stepping the noose and no doubt is as wary as a mouse in a strange cupboard. He has certain well known likes which if developed by a wise maiden would tend to make him the most tractable of consorts.

And certainly these new Fords that the Malheur Motors have on display at their Nyssa show rooms at Fourth and Main do make a lassies heart long for a beau brummel who has the shekels to possess one and who likes to make frequent and lengthy trips through the country side. As a suader for a Galahad in winning the gal of his choice we can think of naught better and for the big he husband who is in the doghouse with the little Mrs. in his fireside a new Ford purchased from Shirley Manser or his crew would go the whole way we trow towards getting him established at his own hearth. To say nothing of just we ordinary folk who like smooth safe riding at a minimum upkeep.

But if it is the old heap that must do for a while yet or the shining new buggy just off the assembly block that needs a bit of going over or adjusting, then a trip to the Pruyn garage at Second and Main and ye will have no reason to regret it. Rather wilt the dismal frown of discouragement that has marred the beauty of the countenance be wiped out with the cheerful grin of satisfaction once Ed and his gang have tuned the critter back in tip top shape again.

And if there is aught that gives a maiden a tweek of desire to have a home of her own it is this new furniture on display at the Tom Nordale furniture mart on Main 'twixt First and Second. 'Tis a neat and dainty shipment of new lamps that came to his establishment the past week. Just the thing for a dainty and useful gift to maid, wife, widow or bride. Or even the sweet young graduate. And just so the male of the specie do not feel that he has plotted against them, Tom has some fifty lamps to make reading in bed a delight.

But if it be the male of the genus homo who is trying to entice his choice of mate to walk double harness, or the gal of the specie, getting him in the mood to want her to want to, then there is no better spot here abouts than the snug dim comfort of the Nyssa Theatre, where a fine show is sure to be on display every evening of the week. And at prices that do not deflate the pocket book to the vanishing point.

Since the first days of our acquaintance in Nyssa one of our favorite hobbies has been attending to farm sales at the Nyssa Sales yard till now we have become an expert in the judging of auctioneers. And this fellow at the Nyssa Sales Yard who took over this past month, the man Bill Lane, is tops among the criers here about. And it is a fine stock going through his pens besides. The sales start promptly on time and it is well to be a little early if one wants a before hand peek and a place close up to the stand.

And what with the lessening of the mothers' load in this day of electricity and modern scientific cooking stoves and appliances, such as Nyssa dealers handle, the clan need not leave early and miss the best of the sale in order that a full meal be served on time, for now all she needs to do is to set her control on her new electric stove and be on her way, well knowing that when she returns her brood will have nourishment, properly cooked. But no longer does she need to worry about the baking for with all the goodies, as well as the homlier supplies, so well baked and nourishment-packed at the Swan's Bakery here in Nyssa, that headache of a baking day can be permanently removed. Their angel cakes freshly iced before leaving the bakery are hard to beat for fine flavor and texture. There is never a failure when one buys one there.

'Tis a bit of an expense, we trow, this setting up of the new home even tho the wedding presents go a long way in providing the comforts and necessities in the new nest. We wonder why some one does not think sometimes of the gift of a nice insurance policy to cover loss of these pretties if the need might arise. Also an accident and health insurance policy covering the manse for mother and dad or even the hay stack.

Especially since our Nyssa insurance agents have all been proven to be outstanding in their efforts to see that all policies are the right ones for the individual and that the payments in case of loss are made promptly. We have three such agents here, the Nyssa Realty office where Don and Jessie Graham work tandem and the Frank Morgan office on Main near First and Bernard Eastman down the line near Third. It is the days right now when all hunting dog owners must keep an eagle eye on their pets if they are to have them safe at home through the hunting season. Many are the reports coming to us of lost dogs. Some have even reported seeing strangers lurking our well known pooches into their cars and driving off. The sad part of this is that such people who will steal another man's dog will turn him loose and neglect him once the hunting season is over and the forlorn animal may no longer be able to find his way to his rightful master. Play safe these days and keep the hunters safe on the family plot behind a fence or well tied on a restraining rope. It will be a happier pooch and master when the final gun of the fall pheasant season is over.

And speaking of keeping pooches happy and in fine fettle for the working days ahead of them, that Furina dog chow that Al Thompson and his cohorts sell at their Feed and Fuel mart on Goodland Second is hard to beat in body building and health preserving qualities.

Not only is it the family pet and the animals of the farm that need special attention to dietary needs with the approach of colder days but that of the family as well but at the Wilson's grocery store on Main near Third they have what it takes to do the job. Fresh fruits and vegetables, that are available in this country side and many that are shipped from distant centers as well. To say nothing of the delicacies and staples canned and packaged, from a package of soup ready for a bit of water to make it a delectable concoction, to a hundred pound sack of flour.

Then at the Nyssa Packing company store one can purchase fine meats and fishes, both fresh and cured that add nourishment and zest to any meal.

And it is a fine lot of buck and antelope that we have seen Doc cut up this past month at Polar Cold Storage. And it will keep once it has been treated to stay over the quick-freezing plate at that establishment, in the lockers many a day against the time of the feast, even though it be a year.
