See where some of our great leaders with quite a following thinks many of us are quite unpatriotic in our opposition to the ideas of organized labor. Organized labor is not the only people that thinks of feathering their own nests first.

We don't want to have to bow down to no axis. If we are to continue to kid ourselves and refer to ourselves as "The great American people" we must now wake up and as a people forget this selfishness.

The only thing we should consider feathering right now has headquarters in Tokio, and we need a great amount of tar too. Right now the Australians hold us in very high esteem. Lets "keep 'em flying."

Jamie Hamilton is stewing around to get some hog accommodations fixed up. He has six old sows to fatten in the next few days. Jonnie knows he will have to go to the army in six months and he is determined to raise all the food possible for its future use.

The magneto on Elza Niccum's tractor went haywire a couple weeks ago and he has been having difficulty getting repairs for it. He finally sent the whole magneto back to the company expects it back any time now but the tractor sets idle all this time and his farming progresses slowly during this time.

Some of us fellows holler because we don't get the kind of service at the local Farm Security office that we would like to get. Expect that office feels the shortage of labor about as much as any one. The other day one of the neighbors went direct to the office with his troubles. He said "when I got in there I believe there were a hundred people in there ahead of me."

There has been very little new farm machinery come to Cow Hollow this spring so we are still confronted the same old problem, that of borrowing farm tools from our neighbor. This year we can feel patriotic in doing this. The idea is to make what equipment available produce all possible. Our big drawback in this system is "those neighbors that borrow and don't bring back when they get through."

We sort of feel the pinch of tires. You take a team and go a mile to a neighbor to borrow a tool and find some other neighbor a mile farther on has borrowed it. He has been done with it for some time but just hasn't brought it back.

Noah Howard was in the Hollow Monday interviewing the neighbor to get witnesses for to try to hold his Homestead. Their contest hearing was set for Saturday April 4th. Noah has asked for a two weeks delay on the grounds that he has difficulty in finding an attorney with experience along that line. Contesting homesteads is something that is not done a great deal now days.

Don Parker and his wife were home at Frank Parkers ovig the week end. Tis the first time he had been back in the Hollow since Xmas time. When Don and Naimo Larsen were married last fall they went to Portland and he went to work in the ship yard. Last Saturday was his schedule to get

POWER—where it's needed! The amphibian tractor—a startling product of American industrial ingenuity—delivers military power where it will do the most good. The electric network—another example of industrial resourcefulness—connects operating electric companies and delivers electric power at points of need. Built up by the business men who manage America's electric companies and produce 75 of America's power, this nation-wide web of electric lines has proved its vital value in the war emergency. Because of this foresight, the electric power to put tank and plane plants, shipyards and arsenals into production was ready almost overnight. As the demand for power zoomed up and up, new construction helped to meet it. Last year, the electric industry installed over 2 1/2 million more horsepower—enough to light one-fourth of all the nation's homes! Careful, planned production will continue—we pledge it—until the war is won—until America's tractors turn again from dealing death to planting peaceful fields. IDAHO POWER
