Meeting Of Food Problem Covered

How can the homemaker best meet the unsettled food situation in her daily routine of trying to feed her family adequate meals for good nutrition? Doubtless that question is facing nearly every busy housewife who has heard so much about meal planning and better nutrition in war time, says Mrs. Amy Larkin, chairman of the Malheur county nutrition committee for defense.

Quick adjustments are often necessary when going to market and finding the meat case empty or no milk in the refrigerator. One of the most important aids in this situation, said Miss Lucy A. ase, extension nutritionist at Oregon State college, is knowing food values and being able to substitute "something else" of similar nutritive value.

The country is well supplied with beans, which are a fair substitute for meat, Miss Case said. Families fortunate enough to have pressure cookers can cook them in 50 minutes at 15 pounds pressure after soaking overnight. A pressure sautepan cooks them in the same time. The vitamin B-one that is impaired by the high temperature can be made up by the use of wheat germ, whole grain cereals and enriched bread. For those persons with delicate digestion it is sometimes helpful to rub the skins off the boiled or steamed beans.

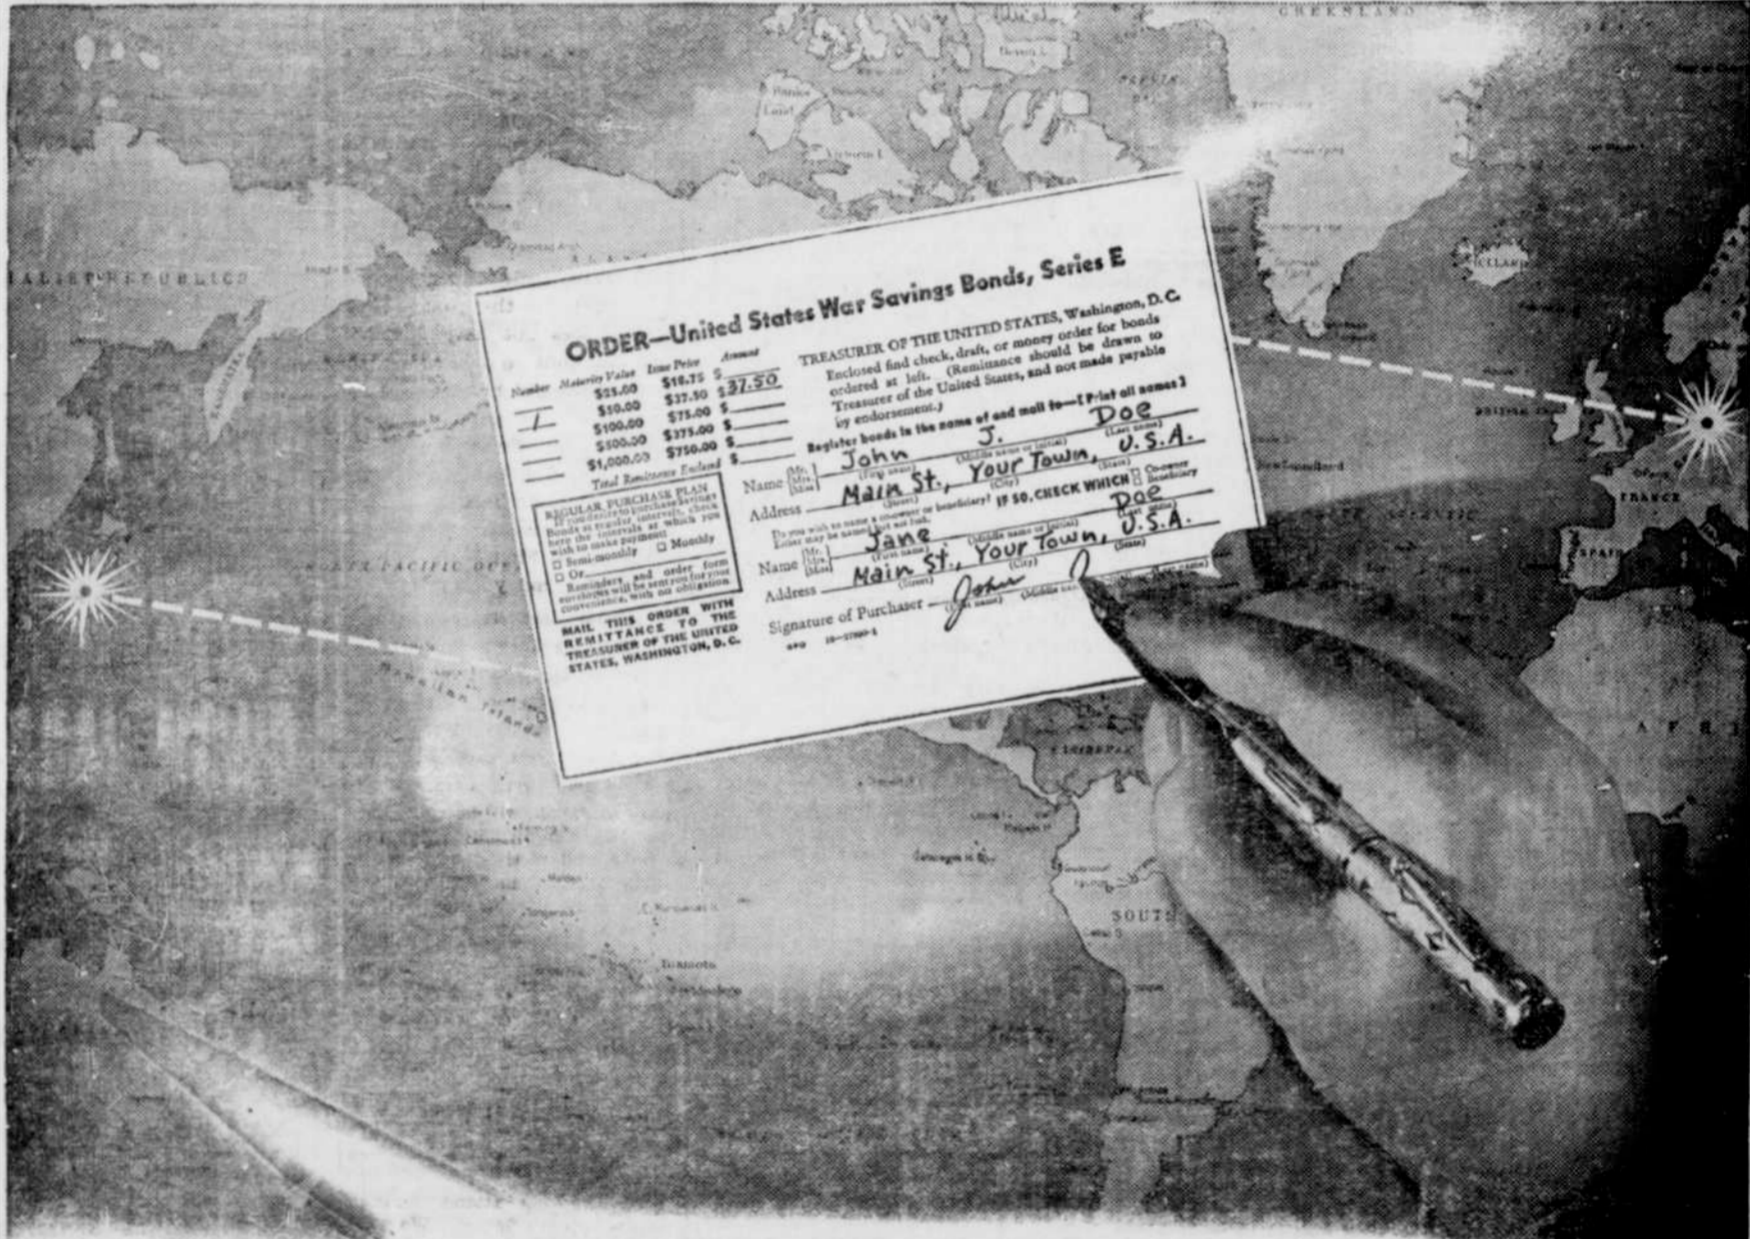

Canned milk may be substituted for fresh milk in many delicious cream vegetable soups, puddings and ice cream.

A knowledge of extending or stretching foods that are scarce is also very helpful today. Two pounds of butter may be made from one pound by creaming it in a bowl over warm water and gradually stirring in one pint of fresh milk or one 14 1/2 ounce can of milk. This blend is easy to spread on the many sandwiches for the war industry workers. It does not fit all baking recipes, however. A more stable butter blend is obtained by soaking one tablespoon of plain gelatine in one-fourth cup of cold water, dissolving it over hot water and adding it with the milk to the butter.

Whipped cream is really an ex-cender. Commercial 19 per cent coffee cream and even evaporated milk have been successfully whipped after standing two days on the coldest shelf of the refrigerator, as can cream carefully removed by spoon from the top of two-day old refrigerated 4 per cent milk. Vis-cogen improves the whipping qualities of cream and can be bought under various trade names.

Plans for next year's food preservation can be started now by saving tin cans for storage of frozen and dried foods next summer. The lid may be left partly attached and the opening covered with adhesive tape when used again. Those who canned vegetables, meat and fish for the first time last summer are reminded by Miss Case that to prevent any danger of botulism food poisoning, all home-canned non-acid foods are boiled 20 minutes before tasting or using in any way. Canned food is boiled after emptying from the jar and on the same day eaten. This rule applies to all home-canned vegetables except tomatoes, and to all home-canned meat, poultry and sea foods.
