LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Tule Lake Project
Newell, California.
Nyssa, Oregon.

Dear Mr. Editor:
Less than a year ago when the relocation camps were being built for the people of Japanese descent, who were being evacuated from the western coastal areas of our country, a statement was made in a newspaper, which has a large circulation in your territory, to the effect that the "Japs" were being coddled and being provided with fine tiled baths while other common peoples were being denied the privilege of even buying such things. Many gullible people, including the writer, were misled into a partial belief, at least, of the statement. It seemed to imply that the Japanese people were entirely unworthy of any consideration.

Being employed as a high school teacher in this camp and coming in close contact with the people here and their living condition the writer wishes briefly to point out the error in the article.

Some more able writers have given true pictures of the conditions through some of the larger magazines but it may be that a local statement will not be out of order in as much as many of the young people of these camps are being released to come and help with the work in the fields of the Snake River Valley.

So much depends, in their lives and in the future peace of the country, upon how they are received by the people "out side" that it would seem that anything that will give a true picture is worth while.

This camp is located on the bed of a drained lake and on a part that is too sandy for farming or for growing grass. Dust storms such as Malheur county people know so well when fields are left bare are the rule here.

What has been the reaction of the people here to the situation?

One of the statements that came to me most frequently on arriving here, from former workers, was that one would be surprised at what the people had accomplished towards their own comforts and to relieve the barrenness of their homes with almost nothing.

In the schools the teachers report a fine response from the pupils. The writer in his teaching experience has not found a better attitude in any class room.

There has been the pleasant experience of seeing these people in their religious meetings and of finding their response and apparent sincerity as inspiring. Three meetings of the united Protestant churches are held each Sunday morning and most of the time many stand and through the meeting for lack of seating capacity. Though they must endure the discomfort of backless wooden benches or stand they come week after week. They are all young people in those meetings. The older people have their services in Japanese.

As stated towards the beginning of this article, many of the young people here are being allowed to come to work in the fields around Nyssa and other parts of the valley. The writer would like to urge your readers to invite some of them into the homes there. Those young people are the choice of the camps. Each one has had to prove his loyalty before he is considered for discharge. Those homes that are opened to these young people will be the richer for the experience just as the life of this writer is richer for the association with them here. He would urge the churches to extend a welcome to them to worship there.

By these statements it is not implied that all of the people here are loyal or extraordinary people. They are just common folks, but many of them are able to make a real contribution to our American life. There are disloyal persons here and have been some that were dangerous to our countries safety but they have been isolated. What group of 15000 people could be brought together without there being rogues among them? A remark of a fellow teacher sums up the condition fairly well, when he said: "It speaks pretty well for a community when we never think of locking our rooms night or day not hesitate to go any place about the village no matter how dark the night."

Very sincerely yours,
Grover C. Lytle

Mrs. America Meets The War

"Ten to two" doesn't refer to the hours your doctor keeps but to the time period recommended by the office of defense transportation for Mrs. America's shopping hours. In this way ODT said housewives will leave room for essential workers who must travel during peak load periods. Public transit facilities, of course, are jammed with millions of additional workers. So when Mrs. America marches out for Easter shopping, she is asked to key her shopping hours to the four hour period from 10 in the morning until 2 in the afternoon.

Food rationing is inspiring more housewives to thoughts of canning fruits and vegetables than in many years, and to those who are planning to "put up" victory garden products, here's a word of cheer from the War Production Board. The WPB has been expecting a record breaking home canning season and so has taken action to see that there are plenty of glass jars, rubber rings and covers for sealing the jars. Zinc lids are banned, however, a recent WPB order released enough metal to permit manufacture of almost all types of closures. And twice as many pressure cookers will be made this year. The WPB pointed out that, however, the increase will not be enough to take care of the increased demand. But production is limited because of the direct war need for the critical steel going into manufacture.

Women war workers are particular in their protection of the skin you love to touch" for reports are that lotions are in great demand for hand care. Of course, glycerine which formerly went into lotions now is being replaced by less critical skin softeners. Women working in munitions plants are taking extra caution in the care of their skin by using special "insulation" creams. These products, which are similar to powder bases, prevent the imbedding of grime in the skin. Another cosmetic item which women doing hard physical work count as important are deodorants. These products, by the way, are not suffering from any shortage of ingredients.

Housewives who buy butter or cheese from the milkman, may pay necessary ration points in advance. So if you decide on Monday that you wish a pound of butter delivered the following Thursday, just turn over eight points to the milkman for future delivery.

Can openers which Mrs. America will find on the market may be limited in the amount of metal allowed, but at least they shouldn't be scarce. The WPB has allowed the production quota for civilian use to be upped from 35 to 50 percent of the amount manufactured in the year ending June 30, 1941. But no more than 12 ounces of metal may be used in each can opener.

Red "A" stamps in war ration book two will be valid for purchases under the meat and fats program until April 30. During the month of April, a new red point stamp becomes valid each week to expire on the same date, April 30. The red "B" stamp matured April 4, the "C" April 11, and the D red stamp will mature April 18, and together with the red "A's", they all will be good until April 30. That provides each holder of war ration book two with 16 basic points per week for the purchase of meats, cheese, canned fish and edible fats and oils.

The sweater girl of 1943 may find plainer sweaters if a recommendation of the knit goods industry advisory committee of the War Production Board goes through. The committee has recommended that all frills and unessential trimming details on sweaters be eliminated to save materials and labor. Further, it was suggested that both materials and colors of knit goods be standardized to 20 basic styles and six colors.

Mrs. America is urged not to pay over the maximum ceiling price for ham or bacon which she puts on the family table with eggs. New uniform prices have been set for all pork cuts sold at retail, and that means the housewife will find the price the same in every store, depending upon its classification. Every retailer must have posted prominently a chart showing the official OPA prices on pork, and housewives are urged to report to local war price and rationing boards or the OPA any instances of overcharges. The new regulation setting uniform dollars and cents ceiling prices for pork cuts, goes into effect on April 1.
