

Washington, D. C., April 13--The first sign of revolt of southern Democrats in the senate against a fourth term for Franklin D. Roosevelt is the plan to draft Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia. The Democrats of the south will not vote for a Republican but might vote for a candidate for president on a ticket other than the Democratic provided the name "Republican" is discarded. Republicans, however, are not inclined to change the name of their party even to win the south.

Senator Josiah Bailey is going forth as a missionary, or evangelist, in crusade to draft his senatorial colleague, Byrd, and Bailey is no slouch as a campaign speaker. He can hold the senate at attention when he is engaged in his subject and he has a background which provides him with an extensive vocabulary. The senator's father was a preacher. Associating with Bailey, but not actively on the stump, is "Cotton Ed" Smith, a Jeffersonian Democrat who uses plain but picturesque language. When the king of England was in Washington on a good will tour he recognized "Cotton Ed" from his photographs and addressed him as Cotton Ed.

Senator Byrd, former governor of his state, made a record for efficiency in that position and held down expenses. Byrd is one of the few men in the senate who is a businessman. He owns and operates the largest apple orchard on the Atlantic coast. His brother is the Antarctic explorer. At the 1932 Democratic convention Byrd was an aspirant for the presidential nomination, along with Franklin D. Roosevelt,

Al Smith, Jack Garner and others. Byrd was shelved but went along with the new deal until he found there was reckless waste of money and the unnecessary building up of alphabetical agencies, and he then began trying to curb these activities. Through Byrd's committee the taxpayers have been saved several hundred million dollars and a half dozen new deal agencies have been liquidated.

The draft Byrd movement is designed to hamstring Mr. Roosevelt in the convention and, there is a nucleus forming in most of the states of the south which promises real opposition to a fourth term. If these southerners can win to their cause a sufficient number of northern Democrats, including Jim Farley, they will provide a riotous nominating convention and the new dealers, while they may win, cannot operate a steamroller as was done in 1940.

In spite of the fact that the agricultural appropriation bill has been passed by the house with the school lunch program eliminated, the subject is not closed and Representative Voorhis of California has announced that other bills will be brought in for authorization of the school lunch project. In a statement on the floor of the house he called attention to the fact that while congress approved the purchase of surplus foods as part of the price support program, it inconsistently refused to permit the food so purchased to be used for school lunch. A worthy cause for which federal appropriations had been made for many years. He expressed the belief that members will be subjected to such pressure by the folks at home that they will be disposed to reconsider their action. In rejecting the school lunch program it was argued in the house that this form of social welfare should be financed by school districts or other local agencies.

More than one year ago the house passed a bill which would open the way to citizenship for every man in uniform fighting with the United States forces, but all this time the measure has been held up in the senate. In a statement on the floor of the house Representative Dickstein asserted that the measure is

THERE'S NO SUBSTITUTE FOR ELECTRIC HOT WATER HEATING!

That's a pretty positive statement from Reddy Kilowatt, but Reddy knows what he's talking about . . . as everyone will agree who ever enjoyed dependable electric hot water.

For dishes . . . for shaving . . . for baths . . . for laundry . . . for any of the scores of chores in every home that call for hot water, there's no substitute for this cleanest and safest water heating method.

Enjoy your electric hot water every way, but right now especially, avoid wasting it. Remember, electricity has gone to war, and dripping faucets waste hot water . . . so does dishwashing under running water rather than in a filled sink.

NO FUSS — NO BOTHER — NOTHING TO TAKE CARE OF!

Whether your electric water heater is installed in a closet or out in the open in the basement, it requires no attention or care. That's why hundreds of families are so enthusiastic . . . why those who don't already own electric water heaters have some of their war bonds already earmarked for them after Victory.
