

Washington, D. C., July 8--Northwestern seed dealers--there are scores of them in Oregon and Washington--are threatened with a lawsuit by the office of price administration for charging more for cleaning seed now than they did in the spring of 1942. It is possible that the seed dealers may carry the case to the supreme court if necessary and the opinion of the highest authority in the land be invited to determine whether OPA is right or wrong. The dealers insist that OPA is wrong.

Os OPA views the matter, the dealers have been "cleaning" the farmers as well as the seed and it is demanding that the dealers refund to their customers something like 20 percent of what they collected for cleaning services within the past year. Dealers say that they have increased the price of cleaning because of the cost of labor. Formerly they paid 60 cents an hour and now they must pay 80 cents an hour. The dealers upped their place sufficient to pay the cost, but OPA insist that the farmers were gyped, notwithstanding that the dealers (who operate cleaning of seed apart from the purchase of seed when it is cleaned) are paying the farmers more than ever for their cleaned seed.

Auditors of OPA have examined the books of some dealers and have taken a list of their customers and interviewed them, expecting the farmers would complain at the 20 cents increase for cleaning. It is said that not one farmer has expressed dissatisfaction for they knew the cost of labor had risen and they, in turn, were receiving a better price. Apparently, however, OPA is not content with the sentiments of the farmers and is determined that they shall be given money the farmers are not asking for.

There are dealers who will put the proposition up to their farmer customers straight. If the dealer cannot charge for the higher labor cost he will clean seed only at a loss, and this will not do. As an alternative the seed-growing farmer will be invited, if he wishes the seed cleaned, to contribute his labor (and that of his son on the cleaning machine and thus hold down the labor costs. Whether the farmers will be willing to donate their time and labor remains to be seen. The seed business in Oregon and Washington is now a big business literally and brings in several million dollars a year to the farmers. However, all of the seed before it is sold must be cleaned.

Henry Agar Wallace, vice president of the United States, has read himself out of the fourth term ticket with Franklin Delano Roosevelt. His public statement, calling Jesse H. Jones, secretary of commerce names disposed of his future as presiding officer of the senate. Mr Wallace charged Jones with interfering with the board of emergency warfare in purchasing materials in Latin America for stockpiles. As a matter of fact there are the procurement of raw materials in lands south of the border: the department of state, the RFC (Jones) through subsidiaries, and BEW (Wallace). There has been some under-cutting and stabbing among these agencies and they have not worked in unison.

The Wallace-Jones affair came on the heels of Elmer Davis charging that the Washington correspondents are prone to play up small controversies instead of taking OWI handouts. Mr Wallace released the story himself. The frictions between cabinet members (Ickes and Wallace when the latter was secretary of agriculture) and bureaus is an old story. War food administration is charging the theorists of office of price administration with incompetence and accusing them of mismanagement with the result of confusion and shortages. Donald Nelson, WPB chieftain, announces that there is an excellent prospect of gasoline relief; Petroleum Administrator Harold Ickes warns that there will be stricter controls.

Jesse Jones is a very big man in the Roosevelt administration, much bigger than Vice President Wallace, and whenever the president has considered clipping the wings of Mr Jones he has refrained, for Jesse Jones is as strong as horse-radish because of his lending agencies. Between the two--Wallace or Jones--the one with the most political asset is the secretary of commerce and not the vice president. Washington state can thank Jones for locating the Reynolds aluminum plant at Longview, although when the engineers recommended Tacoma for a tin smelter Jones sent that new industry to his home town
