Victory Food Hints

"NOTABLE NOODLES" Some homemakers prefer making their own noodles and others just buy commercially made noodles for lack of time or ambition. Which class are you in? If you want a brand new recipe which will make your family smack their lips after a chicken stew or when cooked in beef broth. It's a meat stretcher too. Try this recipe—it's worth a try and the family will ask for seconds.

2 eggs 1 teaspoon salt 1-3 cups sifted enriched all-purpose flour

Add salt to eggs and beat until light. Gradually stir in the flour. Knead the mixture on a floured pastry board until smooth (3 to 4 min.). Roll into a very thin sheet, cover and let stand 20 minutes, turning after 10 minutes. Fold over and over into a two-inch wide strip and cut one-eighth inch wide ribbons. Spread noodles out on a towel to dry for 20 minutes. Drop slowly into 4 quarts of salted boiling water and cook 15 to 20 minutes. Stir frequently during cooking. Drain and serve hot. (May also be cooked in beef or chicken broth.)

Washington, D. C., Dec. 30.—Explanation of Gen. Behron Somervell that he ordered the Canol investment of $130,000,000 in the oil field at Fort Norman and the building of a pipeline and refinery to prepare for the third war does not satisfy Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior and petroleum administrator. General Somervell did not consult Ickes nor the war production board on this use of war department funds, he testified, and this makes both WPB and Ickes peeved at being by-passed. They regard Somervell as acting too high-handed. No other official has gone ahead on his own initiative for such a vast sum of money, but Somervell is like that and he, it should be remembered, is a buddy of President Roosevelt's closest friend, Harry Hopkins. Secretary Ickes says the United States has furnished 95 percent of all the aviation gas that has been used by the allies in this global war. Others of the United Nations have large supplies but which hitherto have been inaccessible because of war conditions. This means that only five percent of the gas for the international fliers has been furnished by the British and the Russians. After the war, Ickes says the United States should protect its supply of gasoline and should assist American citizens in efforts to develop oil fields in other parts of the world than the United States. He estimates that there is a supply of oil hat should serve this country some 20 years but that the demand for fuel oil, motor gasoline and aviation gas will be so tremendous that the wise thing for Uncle Sam to do is to begin looking everywhere for new fields. Mr. Ickes is still protesting that the war department declined to open oil wells in Alaska instead of going to Canada, the Alaska fields according to government reports being far superior to the pool in the Fort Norman district. Originally, Somervell explained that the Japanese threat of invasion caused him to direct the Canol deal, but later he qualified this statement and announced that the Canadian enterprise was also designed to meet a possible situation in world war No. 3. This still does not suit Secretary Ickes, for if the Alaska territory is to be a hot spot years hence the Alaska oil should be developed. The administration forces are very anxious to enact legislation which will enable soldiers to vote in the primary and general elections, whether they are in Australia (Washington and Oregon federalized national guardsmen), in Italy, India, Sicily or anywhere else on the globe, as well as at home. President Roosevelt, back from Cairo and Teheran, has expressed himself as being in favor of these absentee voters. As most of the Republicans and many of the southern Democrats see the picture the administration hopes to capture the soldier vote, and they are insisting that state laws should govern elections and the absentee balloting. Southern Democrats, for example, argue that if a federal law governing the election is enacted the poll tax qualification will be ignored and this would enable thousands of voters (many of them colored) to vote who never have paid a poll tax and who, if they were in their native state, would not vote, for they would not be sufficiently interested in voting to pay the tax. In the past the southern Democrats have been apprehensive that if the colored people voted they would support the Republican ticket and this would make the Democrats a minority party in the south. Now they are concerned lest the colored citizens vote for

Mr. Roosevelt for a fourth term, and many of the southern Democrats are fed up on Mr. Roosevelt, and say so in no uncertain terms. Republicans, who once could count on the colored vote where the colored people were permitted to vote, realize that they have lost this asset (very important in certain northern states) and they are insisting that a federal law covering soldier absentee voting would violate state rights. Present laws in Washington and Oregon provide for absentee voting, but the administration's argument is that provisions of the state laws could not be complied with in time to permit the absentee votes being returned and counted. How the absentee ballots would reach the boys from Oregon and Washington and Oregon is a problem, but by use of airplane the ballots could be returned within 48 hours from any point on the globe and there should be no delay from that source. Apparently, the location of the soldiers would have to be revealed by the war and navy departments if they are to be furnished with ballots under the provisions of the state laws.

Co-op Creamery Adds Machinery

(Continued From Page 1) cent in 1942, 2,416,872 pounds and a 36 percent increase in 1943 3,289,631 pounds. Practically as much milk powder was produced in December as in any month of high milk production season of 1943, thus indicating a gradual increase in the volume of milk going into the local plant. In order to accommodate the large amount of milk going into the plant one additional dryer was added as well as a new boiler this year. It is now the plan of the management to add another dryer in the near future. This dryer will be installed in ample time to handle the spring and summer production of milk, and will make four dryers in operation. In addition to the excellent showing made by the local plant the Cambridge plant has manufactured 386,000 pounds of butter. The Baker plant 542,034 pounds of butter and 328,000 pounds of cheese have been manufactured.

A New Year Dawns

Time has reaped a harvest of blood and tears during the year just past, but there have been good things too. There has been the conviction that the effort, the material goods, the precious human lives that have been sacrificed have been given for a profoundly worthy cause. There has been the feeling of brotherhood in working together for a common aim—the disappearance of much petty selfishness—the growing realization of the meaning of a larger view—a world view. It is our privilege, in 1944, to strive to bring these things into even greater prominence, to fight a hard fight with a goal in sight that is richer, finer, because of the knowledge that the struggle has given us.

WE ARE PROUD OF THE PART THAT WE HAVE TAKEN IN THE WORLD CONFLICT

We have expanded our facilities in order that more food may be supplied our fighting men and as a result vast quantities of butter, powdered milk and dairy products have gone to both military and civilian use. This greater production has been made possible through the patriotic efforts of our dairymen who have gone to great lengths to increase the volume of their dairy products. No small portion of the credit goes to our employees who through devoted service to us have likewise given their efforts to their country at this time of dire need. So may we say

To You and You and You

To our friends and employees in the armed forces: May God be with you to hasten your safe and victorious return.

To our dairy producers, employees and friends at home: May health and prosperity be yours throughout the coming year.

To all Americans everywhere: May each of us continue to do his best to hasten victory.
