FARM RESERVE FUNDS

By Joe Dyer, Malheur Co. War Finance Committee Chairman.

Most farmers still remember the "after war" depression of the 1920's when liberty bonds sold for 82 cents on the dollar. Liberty bonds at that time were negotiable securities. The government redeemed them only at maturity. In the meantime, when farmers needed cash to tide them over, they were forced to sell Liberty bonds for whatever price the buyer was willing to pay. Later these same bonds went above par, but for a time after World War I they could be sold only at a loss.

Farmers learned that negotiable bonds were not safe investments for money intended for financial reserves. Negotiable bonds too often sell below par, all too often when cash is most needed.

Profiting from this experience, the Treasury has made war bonds "depression proof". E, F, and G series are issued in registered form only. Printed on every bond is a table of redemption values—a part of the bond contract itself. Owners of these bonds know now what their cash-in values will be at any future period. They know that they can depend on "depression proof" war bonds to set up a dependable post war reserve for repair of buildings, replacement of obsolete machinery, equipment for post war home needs, and taxes. "Depression proof" war bonds are worth as much in depression as during boom times—actually more, for dollars buy more during depression.

Washington, D. C. June 15.—Not the least costly of the varied activities connected with the war effort is the office of war information, according to facts revealed during discussion in the house of appropriations for the ensuing year. The total sum requested by OWI was $64,390,000 and while some paring was done in committee the reduction was not of such size as to alter the unpleasant picture. Aside from the distribution of news in the United States, for which only $2,264,000 was asked, the work of OWI is devoted to foreign propaganda and the cost of this was stated to be $59,562,000. The total appropriation asked for is $20,000,000 more than was expended by OWI last year, the entire increase being for the overseas branch, headquarters of which is in London.

Questioning the value of the foreign propaganda, members of the house pointed out that while OWI propaganda is supposed to be directed to enemy countries much of the broadcasting is in the English language and would seem to be for the benefit of our allies. There are broadcasts in foreign languages, but they are over short wave, which is little more than 50 percent efficient, and anyway, occupants of enemy countries are forbidden by their governments to listen to short wave broadcasts. Thousands of words are broadcast each month to Algiers, Beirut, Bagdad, Berne, Chungking, Istanbul, Sydney and to all other remote places in the world the people of which are not in position either to help or to hinder the United Nations.

But the activity of the foreign division of OWI is not confined to daily broadcasts. It also produces and distributes enormous numbers of leaflets, pamphlets, books, pictures and films for the edification of millions of people who know little about the United States and care less. And this printed matter covers the most trivial of subjects, such as life in a small town of the United States, pocket calendars, music in the United States, the women of the U.S.A., books of American cartoons, playing fields of America, the valley of the Tennessee, American cowboy and a multitude of other subjects which have no connection whatever with the prosecution of the war. One representative declared he had it on good authority that OWI had even dramatized a mail-order catalogue. But the appropriation was approved with the small reduction mentioned.

To rid the administration of old-age assistance from red tape and assure payment of an equal sum to all qualified to receive this aid, a bill has been introduced in the house which would make the age requirement of 65 years, American citizenship and residence provisions the only basis for receiving such aid. This covers those persons not included in the list of individuals eligible to social security benefits and would forbid deductions for earnings in casual employment or allotments received from sons and daughters in the armed service. The penalty for non-compliance by and state would be the withholding of match money by the federal government.

The unusual spectacle of a display of women's dresses attracted attention in the house a few days ago when Representative Hartley of New Jersey made a series of charges against lend-lease and United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration. Holding up a dress made of seersucker material, he stated that more than six million of such garments had been sent abroad by these two agencies while American women are denied even less costly dresses. The dress shown by him was, he said, "a finer dress than is carried by any retailer in America today." Mrs. Rogers, a representative from Massachusetts, examined the cloth and remarked that it looked very much like the uniforms worn by marines except for a narrower stripe. The sample of dress for lend-lease bore a label reading "Production of the United States, one of the United Nations," but the label was loosely attached and fell off while the garment was being examined.

The recent act of congress is voting pensions to survivors of the civilian employees who built the Panama canal is expected to serve as a precedent for similar claims by Oregon and Washington men who were engaged in fortifying Wake Island when the remote Pacific station was captured by the Japanese. These men were taken to Japan and have been held in concentration camps with only infrequent news of their fate. It may be assumed, however, that the hardships to which they have been subjected could not be less trying than the suffering endured by workers in the disease-infested Panama canal zone and that they are equally deserving of care and compensation. In many cases the families of these prisoners are needy, and many of them have abandoned hope of ever being reunited with husbands and fathers.

1 Minute Sermon

(Look for the silver lining) Why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted in me? hope thou in God: for I shall yet praise him for the help of his countenance. Psa. 42:5

God's people in all ages have had their times of feeling they were cast out of God's sight and forsaken Jacob, the father of the Patriarchs, when he thought his son Joseph was dead and Benjamin, (his youngest) was threatened, was heard to mourn "all these things are against me" yet he lived to see the day when he saw that altho men meant it for evil, God meant it for good. Job, the man who perhaps was tested more than any man, was brought from a place of high repute to an ash heap of shame—his children suddenly taken, his herds and wealth wiped away, himself covered with putrifying sores—yet he could look up to the Father thru his tears and from a heart torn and broken was heard to cry: "The He slay me yet will I trust Him." David, driven from the Palace, in exile, friendless and in despair said "I shall one day perish at the hand of Saul" yet he became the greatest of kings because he was a man after God's own heart and greatly beloved of God. Dear reader, all of God's Children, great and small are greatly beloved of God—even the very hairs of their heads are all numbered (showing God's care for the smallest detail of the lives of His precious ones for whom he gave His life they might have eternal life) Are you passing thru the valley feeling cast out of God's sight? Remember, God is also God of the Valleys and is walking by your side closer where the dangers are thickest and He who is Creator of Heavens and earth has said "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

90,000 Pds. Of Paper Gathered

Forty-five tons of waste paper has been collected in Malheur county, according to Claude L. Seranus, chairman of the Oregon state salvage committee.

The paper was collected in the following months: December, 1943, 20 tons; March, 1944, four tons; April 12 tons, and May nine tons, or a per capita tonnage of 6.1 pounds.

Oregon waste paper collections, exclusive of army camps, housing projects, shipyards and other industrial and commercial agencies, took a turn for the better last month. A total of 1684 tons were reported from volunteer sources in May as against 1009 tons in April, bringing Oregon receipts up to 9181 tons, or a cumulative average of 15.6 pounds per capita since the start of the newspaper-sponsored U.S. victory campaign November 1, 1934.
