COOPERATION NEEDED

Eric Johnston, president of the United States chamber of commerce has returned from a foreign tour with the report that Russia will be badly in need of American manufactured goods after the war.

The present administration has developed Russia into a good customer (now it is probably mostly lend-lease) with prospects that sales to that country will greatly increase, but if we are going to sell to Russia, we must use some of her goods. That applies also to other countries.

The richest country in the world can't expect to sell to poorer countries, if she does not buy. When we enter the international picture on that basis, someone is going to get hurt, because imports affect the home market. Nevertheless we want a high standard of living for ourselves and our children and we want peace. To have both, we must compromise.

World peace is immutably bound to international economic conditions, because wars are fought mostly over trade.

Russia will emerge from the war as the dominant power in Europe and the United States will continue to be the strongest nation this side of the Atlantic. The British will probably continue to control the greatest world-wide empire. If these three can cooperate in an economic way with themselves and with other nations they will wield a great influence in maintaining peace in the world. Talking about peace without granting a chance for existence is merely wasting time and effort.

About 1 1/2 per cent of the meat supply of the United States comes from wild game and birds. We have wondered why our Malheur county sportsmen did not get more pheasants.

CALDWELL RODEO SCHEDULED AGAIN

Caldwell (Special)—After a lapse of two years, due to the government's request that large public gatherings be abandoned as a wartime caution, Caldwell's Night Rodeo will return to the scene of action on August 10, 11, and 12, with a bigger and more varied program of wild west events than ever before. President Aubrey Cooper announces.

Each night's performance will include 11 events, consisting of championship contests in bronc riding, bareback riding, Brahma bull riding, bulldogging, calf roping, Brahma bull fighting, fancy trick riding and roping by the world's most famous arena performers, "high school" horse acts, clowns, mounted quadrilles, and all topped off by the world-renowned announcer, Abe Lefson, who is official announcer for many large rodeos.

Increased purses for all events assures the greatest galaxy of top-notch riders and bulldoggers ever in Caldwell. "Doc" Sorensen, who has so successfully directed Caldwell's Night Rodeos for several years, declared, "Despite the war, many of the world champions are still performing in rodeo arenas." Sorensen said, and he promised that a large number of them would come to Caldwell.

Music will be furnished by the Nampa municipal band, and an all-horse parade from the business district of the city will precede each night's performance.

In addition to the rodeo, Cooper reported, contracts have been signed with the Siebrand Bros. Carnival to provide special entertainment and furnish rides for children. The carnival will be located outside of Rodoe park, near the south entrance.

The rodeo will be held each night at 8:15 (PWT) under the brilliant lights in the arena in full view of grandstands and bleachers. The management announces that no seats will be reserved. Additional seating room is being provided to take care of the overflow attendance which is expected, Cooper said.

in the United States. Flaxseed, oil-cake and meal have been imported from Mexico while Canada has supplied quantities of flaxseed, barely and oats in addition to a designated quota of wheat.

An attempt to equalize returns to producers rather than an effort to establish uniform prices throughout the United States is seen in the recent order by OPA granting increases of 20 to 30 cents a bushel for potatoes grown in Kansas, Nebraska, Maryland, North Carolina and Virginia on the ground that unfavorable weather conditions have reduced the yield in those states. Potato growers of Washington and Oregon have been granted no such concession and they must market their 1944 crop at the same prices which prevailed, month by month, in 1943. Extension of this principle to the pricing of all products on which OPA has fixed ceilings would bring about a chaotic condition and it is improbable that it will be attempted.

There is hope that the shortage of telephone sets will be somewhat eased early this fall as the result of a war production board order permitting their manufacture at the rate of 200,000 sets a quarter. The order was made necessary by the fact that few sets were available for essential use. As soon as this is supplied, according to present plans, telephones will again be supplied to civilians on a limited basis. It is not expected that the full demand can be met until after the war. The Pacific coast area will be first to receive an allotment of the new sets. OPA has so far been unable to solve the mystery of how processors of olive oil can pay an average of $160 a ton for ripe olives while held to a ceiling of $4.75 a gallon for their marketable products when it is estimated that $155 is the top which can be paid and break even. Imported olive oil is a blend of sesame seed, cottonseed and other oils, and it is suspected that the commercial products now being put out by the blenders may contain less of pre olive oil than before prices boomed to the present lofty position.

Reports that rationing of coffee is to be resumed are wholly without authority and are said to have been circulated by grower agencies with the purpose of increasing the price. There is now said to be a four-month stockpile in the United States and imports are expected to total 21,000,000 bags this year, which is at least five million bags more than the estimated consumption.

AT THE NATIONAL CAPITOL WITH Paul Dunham

Washington, D. C., July 20.—Importations of flaxseed and other feed grains were not increased nor were prices reduced by suspension of the tariff rates on these products, according to war food administration. The experiment was first tried last December, when there was an acute shortage of feed for livestock, by passage of an act suspending the tariff for 90 days. It was thought supplies could be brought in from Canada and Mexico by commodity credit corporation at a lower price because of removal of the duty. But Canadian and Mexican growers had a different idea. While the two governments are cooperating with the United States in the war effort, the producers of those countries adopted a policy of "business as usual" and immediately booted the price in exact amount of the tariff rate.

Later, to further test the experiment, congress extended the duty free period for another 90 days, but the results were no more satisfactory and when, in the final days before the summer recess, it was proposed to grant another extension, this time for 180 days, there was strong opposition on the floor of the house. War Food Administrator Marvin Jones stated that the demand for flaxseed was such that, with or without the duty, "every available bushel was being imported for which shipping space could be found," and that the net result of the cancellation of duty was to increase the selling price asked by foreign producers.

This profiteering attitude on the part of Canadian and Mexican producers angered members of congress and if their resentment continues it is quite likely to influence future congressional action on tariff revisions which have been proposed as an incentive to trade expansion in peacetime. The situation is of immediate interest to residents of the Pacific northwest because of the shortage of stock feed resulting from lend-lease operations and abnormal use of grains in the production of war materials. It was stated that the condition would change with cessation of hostilities, when American production will again become available for domestic use, but for the present it is a source of irritation and involves an added expense which must be reflected in loss to livestock producers
