11 and 12, Block 40, Price, $15.00. C. W. GLENN, Sheriff, Malheur County, Oregon. Date of first publication, November 9, 1944. Date of last publication, December 7, 1944. Date of sale, December 12, 1944.

Washington, D.C., Nov. 22—War production board has learned the hard way that one of its earlier pet theories was unworkable. At the beginning of the war, when requirements of the armed forces imposed what seemed to be a well nigh impossible task upon industry, officials whose duty it was to meet these requirements advanced the theory that greater efficiency could be obtained through concentration of production in the larger plants. This may have been logical in theory, but it didn't work out in actual practice. Even the largest plants lacked space and equipment by which the immense quantities demanded could be produced, and the letting of sub-contracts became necessary—small production of special parts by a large number of small plants.

One of the earliest experiments, which has now been completely abandoned, was in the production of alarm clocks; and it probably became one of the most irritating of the inconveniences necessitated by the war. In pre-war days the annual output of alarm clocks was 12,500,000 and these timepieces were essential equipment in every workman's home. War production board ordered that the production of alarm clocks be limited to two plants in order that all others might turn to the production of war needs. Immediately the output of alarm clocks dropped to about one million a year and a howl went up from every part of the country. War workers who had to report for duty at all hours of the day and night couldn't make the grade without an alarm clock—and the shelves of every dealer were stripped in record time.

At long last WPB realized its mistake and, beginning the first of this month, all restrictions on the manufacture of alarm clocks were removed and the field is now wide open to every concern that can find the material and the men to do the work. Bicycle makers have also been freed so far as machines or adults is concerned; the ban on wheels for juveniles remains, and this constituted 85 percent of the prewar demand. Lifting of the restrictions on the bicycle industry however, is not expected to start a headlong rush, but the concentration theory has been discredited and abandoned.

Farmers were unduly elated, it has developed, by the war food administration decree freeing farm equipment distributors from control and farmers from rationing. The order was a happy gesture but it does not in the least affect the farm machinery situation. Not a single additional machine was made available by the order and there is no immediate prospect that the shortage in farm machinery will be relieved in time to be of benefit in 1945 planting and harvesting. The order did remove a mass (or mess) of red tape and in isolated instances someone may be helped.

Farm machinery manufacturers are still subject to rigid priorities, both as to material and manpower, and there will be no easing of the situation until the war in Europe is ended. This was made clear when WPB chairman J. A. Krug turned down a request from automobile manufacturers for priority ratings on current orders for machine tools. Some reconversion is being permitted, but not for such plants as are still required for supplying army and navy needs. Manufacturers of farm machinery are in this category and they will not be permitted to exceed their quota of civilian production while their facilities are needed for the armed forces.

Almost no attention is being given by press services to the hearing now being conducted by the interstate commerce commission into the freight rate structure of the country, although every section is directly interested in the outcome. The hearing is for re-examination of freight rates and the decision will be on whether suspension of the 1942 freight rate increase shall be extended beyond January 1. It is expected that ICC will either cancel the rate increases permanently or restore them. Permanent cancellation has been asked by 16 state commissions and national and southeastern associations of railroad grounds that the roads are receiving and utilities commissioners on the adequate revenues and that this prosperity will continue for an indefinite period after the war.

Opposed to this view is the fact that operating costs, in July as an example, increased by $59,000,000 while the gross revenue gain was but $18,000,000. Also, the tax burden has become increasingly heavy with no prospect of a lessening when peace comes. It is admitted by the railroads that their revenues have greatly increased, but it is also claimed that the peak has been reached and a decrease in earnings with no possibility of reducing expenses is inevitable under peacetime conditions.
