Canned Fish -- GI Style

Two Navy corpsmen and two Marines teamed up to furnish approximately 200 pounds of fish for members of Major General Louis E. Woods' Fourth Marine Air Wing, somewhere in the Marshalls. For want of a better name, the species is called "gizmo" fish. The unit's medical officer certified their edibility before the fish were placed on the table. The quartet, whose catch provided a welcome change of diet for the Leathernecks, are, left to right: Pharmacist's Mates Second Class Tommy C. Goodwin of Los Angeles, Cal., and Robert S. Dersham of Sterling, Colo.; Technical Sgt. Thomas B. Olson of Sioux Falls, S. D., and Sgt. Jethro K. Jones, of Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Snyder asserts, would give employment to one or two million men "when the shelling stops in Europe." Had such highways been built prior to 1940, he insists, it would have saved ten billion dollars in transportation costs and perhaps shortened the war, this saving human lives. Mr. Snyder optimistically expressed the belief that a majority of the member of congress are favorably disposed to some plan of highway construction similar to his program, but previous congressional action would hardly seem to warrant his optimism.

During senate discussion of reports that the Tydings amendment to the selective service law is being violated by the induction of farm boys in the army and navy it was disclosed that the number of men directly engaged in the production of foodstuffs is lower than at any time in the past 50 years. In 1944 the number of people on farms was 25,531,000, a decrease since 1940 of 4,748,000, and this at a time when farmers are being called upon for the greatest production in the nation's history.

The Tydings amendment specifically states that "Every registrant found by a selective service local board to be necessary to and regularly engaged in an agricultural occupation shall be deferred from training and service in the land and naval forces so long as he remains so engaged and until such time as a satisfactory replacement can be obtained." Violation of this law was declared on the senate floor to be due to misinterpretation of instructions sent out by General Hershey, the director of selective service.

CHEST SURVEY UNIT DEVELOPED

By Mrs Edna Farris County Health Nurse The Oregon Tuberculosis association monthly bulletin announces Oregon's new "chest x-ray survey unit" is now in operation. Schedules for the visits to the counties are now being worked out and will be announced soon.

The unit is notable for size, its length being 38 feet overall and the width 8 feet. It contains a complete X-ray room, darkroom for the developing of films, dressing rooms and cabinets for supplies. The equipment is Westinghouse and is capable of taking 35mm and 14 x 17 x-ray pictures. Approximately 300 examinations. Mr and Mrs A. A. Anderson per day may be given extra charge of the work. The films are to be read by a panel of physicians. Oregon is the first state to use the name "chest X-ray survey unit." The word "survey" is the key to the program, since this is not a clinic and tuberculosis is not to be diagnosed in the unit. It is used solely for surveying the apparently well population to find the hidden or unknown cases of tuberculosis. The unit is part of the great national program to find tuberculosis. The money derived from Christmas seals have bought and paid for this chest X-ray survey unit and will pay for the operation. It will be a education program. Tuberculosis is great contribution to the health "catching". It is "preventable".

Washington, D. C., Feb. 8--Whether intentional or not, it is apparent that the effect of the recent report of so-called experts on the rubber situation will be to discourage continued operations of the synthetic rubber plants in the United States in which the government has an investment of $750,000,000 and which have a practical capacity of one million tons a year. The report of the board of experts, composed chiefly of representatives of Great Britain and The Netherlands, was made public by the state department and it forecast a rubber surplus in the post-war period with an estimated consumer demand "not likely to reach more than 500,000 tons annually." The board estimated that the post-war production of natural and synthetic rubber will be more than twice the demand.

The figures in the board of experts report do not square with the known facts. In the first place, American rubber manufacturers estimate that the post-war demand in the United States will be 850,000 tons annually and that the world demand will be not less than 1,600,000 tons. It is true that the natural rubber supply, under favorable conditions and with all plantations restored to full production, should equal this figure, but there would be no margin of safety in the synthetic rubber enterprise is abandoned, and the people of the United States would be compelled to pay whatever the plantation owners cared to ask. In the years immediately following the first world war their price was so exorbitant as to amount to an international scandal, and it is currently reported that the British and Dutch have no thought of dissolving their cartel agreement.

The whole situation was reviewed at some length in a recent speech by Representative Johnson of Illinois, and he insisted that there is good reason to believe that continued improvement in the manufacture of synthetic rubber will bring its cost down to a competitive basis with the natural product. The price difference at the present time amounts to about 10 cents a pound. In favor of the synthetic rubber program it is also argued that there will be a surplus of both oil and grain after the war and that the synthetic rubber plants would provide a market for much of this surplus. Industrial alcohol used in the manufacture of synthetic rubber can be made from either oil or grain. It is suspected in some quarters that the movement to close out the synthetic rubber industry is already under way.

Congress will not be permitted to ignore the plan for a super highway system advanced in several previous sessions by Representative Snyder of Pennsylvania. In fact, he has introduced his bill at every session since 1937 and usually it has died in committee. The bill has been re-introduced and again it calls for the construction of three highways running east and west and six running north and south across the United States, each 100 feet wide and with not more than four percent grade. To build these roads,
