FARM WOMEN HELP IN RAISING INCOME

Farm women cooperating with FSA in Malheur county expect to add from $125 to more than $200 to the farm income this year by planning ample gardens as an important part of their home plans, reports Mrs Irene N. Makinson, farm security home management supervisor of Ontario. Gardens have always been the basis for the FSA live-at-home programs to insure a bountiful supply of fresh and canned fruits and vegetables.

"FSA home-makers particularly stress laying out their garden on paper to make the fullest use of their garden plot, insure a garden large enough to meet the family food needs, and permit buying of needed seeds and plants without delay when planting time arrives," said Mrs Makinson. "Location of the garden within easy walking distance of the kitchen door, a good fence to keep out stray livestock and poultry, early ordering of seed and fertilizer are being emphasized in this year's plans.

Another garden practice growing in popularity with FSA families is to set aside a corner of the plot for establishing an herb garden. While many families grow dill and parsley, other herbs such as sage, thyme, sweet majoram, chives and mint usually do well and make an interesting addition. Most of the herbs can be used fresh or dried and packaged for later use.

While the size of gardens usually depend on the type of soil and types of vegetables, fruits and berries raised, it must also be based on the needs and preferences of the family, Mrs Makinson said. One FSA family last year raised all the vegetables and berries used by the family on a garden less than an acre and with potatoes estimated the value at market prices to be over $200. Garden information and plans for FSA families may be secured through the local office or through the county agent's office.

NURSES MAY GET LIBRARY MATERIAL

Nurses are needed to play a vital role in the present conflict. This need has been intensified by the fact that a number of graduate nurses enrolled in the ranks of the profession is inadequate to meet the needs of a world at war, Mrs Edna Farris of Vale, Malheur county public health nurse, said.

For this reason the American Red Cross and the U. S. nurses corps have joined in an appeal to inactive nurses, wherever possible, to return to duty and have appealed to young women, desiring to play an important role in days of war and to equip themselves with a profession which will afford them worthwhile careers in the post-war world to enroll in the cadet nurses corps. To aid prospective recruits by giving them an over-all conception of the profession, and to provide refresher material to enable nurses returning to duty to re-acquaint themselves with nursing techniques, there has been compiled a list of the Oregon state library's books on nursing. This list may be consulted at the local library or county Red Cross.

The care of YOUR ELECTRIC MOTORS is plenty important

It's up to American farmers to take the best possible care of their tools of food production. By following a few simple rules, years of life can be added to your electric motors... as well as make them do more work.

Dust, cold, and moisture are especially injurious to electric motors. So keep careful check to see that your motors are kept clean and dry. Proper lubrication of electric motors is one of the first steps to efficient operation. Just follow these rules:

1. Do not lubricate electric motors while in operation.
2. Do not overlubricate.
3. Remove excess or spilled lubricant immediately.
4. Drain and flush oil reservoir once a year with flushing oil. Replace with a good grade oil.
5. Check overflow opening to be certain it isn't clogged.
6. Several hours after lubricating, recheck for excess oil.

Avoid overloading. Use some type or relay device to protect your motors from overload damage. Circuit fuses protect the wiring only -- NOT THE MOTOR. Check belt tension and alignment.

EQUIPMENT CARE IS IMPORTANT

Your electric farm equipment needs but little care — but that little care is important. If a major breakdown occurs, do not attempt to repair it yourself — call an experienced repairman.
