County Clerk

Washington, D. C., Oct. 18—The Reconstruction Finance Corporation is prepared to start on a grand lending program. If a city wishes to improve or extend its water system, build a stadium or school, or remodel its municipally owned docks, streetcar system, gas or electric plants, all it has to do is to comply with circular No. 22 and RFC will do the financing. The general pattern of these proposed loans is somewhat similar to the program followed in the early days of the depression, when there were loans and grants; only this time there will be no grants and the loans must be repaid with interest.

It is the considered opinion of RFC that there are many communities which wish to make permanent improvements in the immediate post-war years but that they may have some difficulty in accumulating the necessary funds. In which case RFC is prepared to step in with a promise to make the loan 100 percent, or to cooperate with banks or other lending agencies. RFC is willing to purchase revenue bonds with which to pay for the loan. The revenue from the gasoline tax, the revenue derived from collection of bridge tolls or fees for water service are all considered good, sound resources which will eventually liquidate the securities acquired by the lending agency.

These loans, if made, will not come from the federal treasury, and they will enable municipalities and other political subdivisions to do their own financing with the assistance provided by RFC. If a major project which would require two or three years to complete sells its securities to RFC, it need not sell all of the authorized bonds at once, but RFC will make the purchases from time to time during the construction period. This arrangement will save the interest cost on bonds not sold until the money is needed. This is offered as an inducement to community improvement.

RFC is offering a program of self-help and communities will not have to look to congress for an appropriation under some general federal aid program. Each community will "be on its own." Of course, the program would give RFC the power, in a limited way, over any and all of the proposed public works which RFC money is requested. RFC must approve the project, as to its contribution to the general welfare and determine whether the sponsors will be able to meet the payments on the revenue or general obligation bonds. Quoting from the Brewers Journal and department agriculture statistics, Representative Rees of Kansas declared on the floor of the house that the sugar problem in the United States involves the question of whether the people want more sugar on the family table, or whether it is to be consumed by the breweries. Department of agriculture figures show that the brewers use 2,209,200 pounds of rationed sugar annually, and to this the Brewers Journal agrees. But the treasury department reports that 285,000,000 pounds of sugar and sugar sirups is the annual consumption of the beer makers. Both the sugar and the sugar sirups would have been welcome additions to the canning program of American housewives. Representative Rees said, and would have been an invaluable contribution to the available food supply. Coming from a prohibition state, Mr. Rees holds to the theory that beer is not a food but an undesirable luxury.

The amazing extent to which activities of the federal government overlap and interlock was disclosed by Representative Kelley of Pennsylvania in his comment on a move to establish a department of public welfare. The house committee of which he is a member has, he said, heard witnesses from 31 federal agencies in its attempt to tabulate activities relating to the problems of the physically handicapped, and had requested reports from 41 others. Not all of these agencies, of course, have for their main responsibility some health or social service activity, but each has functions bearing on the health and welfare of some segment of the population. Mr. Kelley insisted that even though they were doing worth-while things there is a confused and duplicating situation.

Although the United States has 4,324 ships of all kinds, built at a cost of $17,000,000,000, this country is not as well equipped as foreign nations to handle foreign trade and more than half these vessels cannot be economically operated as cargo carriers. The question worrying congress is how to dispose of the less desirable types without too great loss and whether subsidies will be necessary to assure use of the better class vessels.
