Every experienced farmer knows that one of the greatest questions before the Nation now pertains to the future trend of prices for farm products, farm operation cost and marketing costs, says L. H. Breitaupt, O. S. C. extension agricultural economist. Even now there are indications of a change taking place in the trends, but the trend is not too easy to measure from the available data, he says.

In October this year, the cost index that is used for figuring parity prices stood at 175 percent of 1910-1914, but this index does not include the cost of farm labor and marketing charges. In 1944, these items took considerably more than half of the consumer's dollar paid for food, data show.

Percentage-wise, the greatest increase in Oregon's farm operation expenses in 1944 over 1939 was in hired labor. This item increased from 22.8 percent of total farm operation expenses in 1939 up to 31.4 percent in 1944. Compared with 1910-1914, farm wage rates stand at about 345 percent, about double the increase in the parity formula index.

Currently, the data show food marketing charges average only about 16 percent above 1935-1939, requiring about 50 percent of the consumer's dollar. This covers all costs from the point of first delivery by the farmer through to the consumer.

This percentage is low in relation to the situation between the two world wars when marketing charges took 60 percent, or more, and the farmer's share of the consumer's dollar amounted to 40 percent or less. Deductions for farm operation expenses, of course, must come out of the farmer's share.

AAA NEWS

FEDERAL CROP INSURANCE
Federal crop insurance is completing a successful year. During the first six months of the new program, more than 550,000 farms were covered by insurance—more than in any previous full-year program.

Beginning early in 1945, federal crop insurance was offered on wheat, flax and cotton crops all over the nation. Corn and tobacco insurance was offered to farmers in a restricted number of counties on a trial basis. Already participation in wheat insurance for the 1944 crop exceeds that of 1943, and the majority of applications for spring wheat have not yet been filed. For other insurable crops, the coverage includes 113,183 farms producing cotton, 38,072 farms growing flax, 12,363 growing corn, and 12,288 planted in tobacco.

Soon after the first of the year farmers will begin filing applications for cotton, spring wheat and flax. Trial insurance programs will again be offered for corn and tobacco. Not additional crops will be included under the experimental program in 1946.

MOVEMENT OF CATTLE TO FEED LOTS HEAVY
Cattle are moving into feedlots at a rapid rate. If the movement continues, as expected, near-record numbers will be on feed by the first of next year. With the exception of Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Arizona, reports from the feeder states outside the corn belt all show increases in cattle on feed. In the southwestern states, the reduction in feeding is due largely to smaller feed production and late winter wheat pastures. In the corn belt, extensive frost damage to corn has increased the demand for feeder and stocker cattle, and shipments into this area have been heavy. For October, shipments into the area were the largest on record for that month.
