TECHNICAL HELP OFFERED
Farmers in many Oregon counties will have technical help in staking out a dam planning a drainage ditch, or reorganizing an irrigation system under the 1946 agricultural conservation program. A new provision makes it possible to use part of the funds for practice payments to provide conservation services in the form of such assistance to farmers taking part in the program.

The state committee has earmarked $30,000 of the 1946 funds for that purpose. The amount of such assistance offered in any one county will be up to the county committee in deciding whether practice funds should be used for services. The availability of engineers or other men with the right qualifications probably will be limiting factor in some counties. The amount of funds set aside for technical help will be deducted from the county's allocation for practice payments.

SOIL SAVING HITS HIGH
Reports from county committees on performance under the 1945 agricultural conservation program indicate that soil and water conservation work costing more than six million dollars was accomplished on Oregon farm lands under the program. Through practice payments, the government will contribute about 2 1/2 million to the cost.

The reports show that in any counties the value of practices performed greatly exceeded the county's allocation funds. This means that in those counties the practice payment to the farmers will have to be reduced in accordance with farm allowances established on farm plans last spring.

COMMITTEEMEN START SURVEY
AAA committeemen this month are making a grass-roots appraisal of the conservation measures needed on Oregon farm lands. The check will include all practices needed to make repairs on land damaged by erosion and depletion, as well as the measures necessary on good lands to keep them that way.

In addition to the work needed, the survey will show the extent to which assistance is necessary to get the job done.

This statewide check-up on the condition of agricultural resources is being launched in most counties with a general meeting of all community committeemen and other representative farmers and leaders. At this meeting basic figures on acreages and production are turned over to the committeemen who will do the job in each community.

The information gathered in each district will be put together into a county report at a second meeting later this month.

FAT SALVAGE

The food outlook for 1946 has improved greatly in recent weeks, however, the supply of inedible fats and oils necessary for the manufacture of many personal and household items is lower than at any time during pre-war years.

Reminding local housewives of this critical shortage, Glen L. Hutchinson, chairman of the county AAA committee, pointed out that fat saving must be practiced every day, if existing shortages of laundry soap, paints, textiles, wall paper and other commodities are to disappear. Mr. Hutchinson's statement is based on word from the USDA production and marketing administration.

During the war years housewives accounted for 10 per cent of the inedible production and collection must continue at this rate if the supply is to be built up to pre-war levels.

Mr. Hutchinson explained that world exports and net imports of fats and oils into the United States are not expected in volume until later this year, perhaps in 1947. For this reason the American kitchen must continue to contribute to the backlog of fats and oils from which the nation must draw for essential personal and household items.

The end of rationing has made available more cooking fats, lard and shortening. With larger supplies now moving from grocery stores into homes, housewives will have a great opportunity to save more used fat than they did when rationing cutailed supplies, Mr. Hutchinson said.

Edible fats and oils which have become rancid or too highly flavored for further cooking use, should be salvaged and drained into the fat salvage containers and returned to neighborhood dealers.

These fats and oils, in turn, will come back to housewives in soaps, soap powders, and many other items now in short supply, Mr. Hutchinson said.

Elimination of seasonal surpluses, heretofore constant threats to farmers' prices for foodstuffs, is one of the major goals in the department of agriculture's program of converting wartime food production to peacetime full-employment consumption levels, announces Glen L. Hutchinson of the committee.

Machinery for smoothing out these bumps in the supply-demand road is oiled and waiting in the production and marketing administration. It is a more powerful model of a machine designed in pre-war days and tested over the ruts of a few wartime surpluses. This machine is a program for creating and expanding consumer demand to take care of seasonally excessive supplies of foods which threaten farm prices. Operated by the abundant foods marketing division of PMA, it includes planning and operation of campaigns in cooperation with all food distributing trades and consumer groups.

EXPECTED PATTERN ON CATTLE FEEDING:
Although the number of cattle on feed on January 1 was 4 per cent smaller than a year earlier, the department of agriculture expects a record or near-record number to be fed this winter. It is expected that a larger-than-usual proportion of the cattle to be fed probably will be marketed before midyear, because of the relatively scarce supply of corn that will be available for feeding next summer, and the prospect of lower returns from cattle after subsidies to cattle feeders and to slaughterers are withdrawn.

PRODUCTION PAYMENT ON LAMBS INCREASES:
The sheep and lamb production payment rises to its highest point of the year on February 1. The rate becomes $2.50 a hundredweight on lambs weighing 65 to 90 pounds, and $3.15 on lambs over 90 pounds. The payment on all other classes of lambs and sheep sold for slaughter continues at $1.00 a hundred pounds. These rates will continue for the next three months, through April. Application for sheep and lamb payments can be made at the AAA office in Ontario.
