services with weakened or lost social security protection for their families, Mr. Welo pointed out. Furthermore, he added, many of the younger veterans were prevented by their military service from building up the coverage they might otherwise have acquired under the old-age and survivors insurance program.

"It was to remedy this situation that congress passed and the president approved the amendment, which makes the qualified ex-serviceman a fully insured person under the social security act for the first three years following his discharge and protects his dependents during that period", the social security administration official said.

"The law does not extend this time beyond three years after demobilization, because it was thought that by this time most veterans will have succeeded in creating social security protection as the result of their civilian employment in jobs covered by the social security act".

Mr. Welo cautioned, however, that benefits are payable only when the survivors are not receiving veterans administration payments. National service life insurance benefits are not considered as such payments.

In order for his survivors to be qualified for benefits under the new amendment, a veteran must have been separated from the service, without a dishonorable discharge, within four years and a day from the officially determined end of world war II, have had at least 90 days of active duty between September 16, 1940 and the official end of the war or have been discharged because of disability incurred or aggravated in service in line of duty, and must have died within three years of the date of his discharge.

DEADLINE SET ON VETERANS' CLAIMS

Survivors of qualified veterans who died within three years of their discharge but before the effective date of the amendment, August 10, 1946, have until midnight, February 10, 1947 to file either original claims for monthly benefits or applications for benefit recomputation if they are to receive retroactive benefits payable to the month of the veteran's death, Vernon A. Welo, manager of the LaGrande field office of the social security administration explained.

Claims for lump-sum benefits on the records of such veterans may be filed within six months of the enactment or within two years of the death of the veteran. Claims for monthly benefits other than retroactive may be filed at any time by qualified persons.

The new section of the social security act provides protection for the families of qualified veterans of world war II in the event of their death during a readjustment period of three years after their discharge from the service, Mr. Welo said.

Because time spent in military service acts to reduce the amount of the potential benefits earned by the worker in civilian employment under the old-age and survivors insurance program of the social security administration, many veterans came out of the armed

Attention Farmers

I wish to make clear a point that was erroneously stated in last week's ad regarding Declaration of Estimated Tax by Farmers.

Taxpayers classified as Farmers, and who are on a calendar year basis, have until January 15th to file a Declaration of Estimated Tax. If a Declaration is filed on or prior to that date the Farmer then has until March 15th to file his Final Income Tax Return. However, if the Final Tax Return is filed on or before January 15th the Farmer is relieved of all estimating requirements and the filing of an "estimate" is not necessary.

GRANGERS SHAPE THE PATTERN

of OREGON'S DEVELOPMENT

You may be surprised at the size of Oregon's dairying industry. But Grangers aren't.

The value of the state's dairy products last year is estimated by the U.S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics at $40,657,000—money from milk that flows through every trading level to every Oregonian. Through the years, the Grange has worked for a bigger and better dairying industry as one phase of its program to build a greater commonwealth by strengthening its most important foundation—agriculture.

Thirty thousand Oregon Grange members—all forward-thinking farmers—strive constantly for agricultural progress. This, they know, shapes the pattern of Oregon's development the right way, because what helps the farmer helps every Oregonian.
