"THIS LITTLE PIGGIE WENT TO MARKET"

Yes, and many more pigs will grow to go to market if they're raised by electric brooder. Baby chicks, too, have a greater chance for survival, as losses and labor are both cut when you use an electric brooder.

During the war farmers raised and marketed more pigs and chickens than ever before and electric brooding helped to achieve this fine record.

Electric brooders are low in cost and inexpensive to operate. In fact, a few boards and a heat lamp are all that is needed to make a pig brooder. This easily-constructed brooder often cuts pig losses in half, thereby bringing big returns on your investment of money and labor.
