HIGH CROP VALUES
ON PROJECTS SHOWN

BOISE, Idaho—Farmers on the 15 federal reclamation projects in the Pacific northwest in 1946 produced crops valued at $210,337, 163, a record high, R. J. Newell, regional director for the bureau of reclamation, said.

The 1946 returns from the 1-829,435 acres under cultivation on the developments exceeded the 1945 total value by $20,416,509, Mr. Newell said. The cumulative value of crops produced on the projects in the northwest since water was first delivered by the federal bureau in 1907 exceeds 24 billion dollars, he declared.

The average per-acre return on Bureau projects in the northwest in 1946 also was at a record high, $114.35. The previous peak was reached in 1945, when the average per-acre value was $106.98.

On the Owyhee project the net area in cultivation was 104,926 acres, gross crop value $10,007,871, and per-acre crop value $95.38.

GRANGERS SHAPE THE PATTERN of OREGON'S DEVELOPMENT

Would you rather have the goose that laid the golden eggs or Oregon's chickens and turkeys? Grangers would take Oregon poultry any day.

The U.S. Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates the annual value of the state's poultry and poultry products alone at $34,000,000. That is farm wealth which poultry raisers fed into Oregon business—and some of it got to you. It bears out the old Grange story that everyone gains from solid, prosperous agriculture.

Thirty thousand of the state's up-and-coming farmers are Grangers. They are directed by these common motives—better living and working conditions; a very real desire to continue shaping the pattern of Oregon's development for the good of all.
