THE HAPPY FARMER

By Clarence Niccum

The Bible says, "All things work together for good to them that love the Lord." Sometimes it is a little difficult to understand something but I surely do believe all the Bible. My faith is as good as that of the old colored brother. He was coming down the trail singing "My faith looks up to Thee". He met his old pal.

"Hello Sambo. I've been gwin' over to dis camp meetin' and I've doan got converted."

Sambo uncured, "Yess."

Rastus: "Yesser and I know every word in dat Bible is true."

Sambo: "Now look here Rastus are you going to tell me you believe that story in the good book about Jonah swallowing the whale?"

Rastus, scratching his woolly head and giving the wind a little time to get back into his sails: "Well if the Bible says so its just got to be true."

Now back to this "all things." A few days ago when I was wildly dashing around trying to find someplace where I could borrow $303.42 to pay my water with I surely was wondering about that "together for good" stuff. Ill tell you that when you get your affairs in such a state that good old Uncle Sam cant help you with none of his alphabetical associations you have sure gotten things in a mess.

Well when I got home at the end of the second days dashing hither and yon, I found a check in the mail, the dependable Sugar Co's final payment for my part of their beets. That was almost half enough. When I finally got quiet in bed along in the nite I reely got a brain storm. Next day I went down and paid the water bill. I hope that at least one of my creditors doesent learn how the rest of that $303.42 was raised until Uncle Sam pays off on the beets 'oo.

"All things work together for good."

Motto: "Sertainly wont allow things to get in this kind of a mess next year."

We got a showing up now, that we can see at our community church. After the preacher Al Brimm and his good wife have spent days and days squaring up the basement hole and building the forms in sections he finally persuaded me and a couple other neighbors games and Gene Stephens to help him for a while to set up the inside forms. Now after he and the good wife gets these forms squared up, lined up and levelled up. The windows and door frames in and the rest of the forms built maybe he can get some help to set the outside forms up.

James Stephens says "Clarence did you ever try to irrigate with gravity?" "Fred is irrigating his beets up on the hillside and I am trying to use his waste water down here on the flat." Well any irrigation knows what he is up against. By the time all those little rills get down off the hill get together and then spread out again on the flat dirt all their silt and trickle off into the drain some body has done a lot of sweating to take care of all that mud. James is getting a lot of auffy good-soil. But elieve me he is getting it the hard way. Believe I would just let her all go into the drain. Irrigating with a neighbor's waste water is about as profitable financially speaking as raising a bunch of boys. Somebody who hasn't any says: "My you have a fine bunch of boys growing up."

"You will have lots of help pretty soon." They just dont know how dad sweat while they were growing up. When they have grown up, gone to school nine months out of 12 for twelve or fourteen years, finished high school and foon the home coop then dad can figure up all the time he has spent trying to guide their foot steps. awright, taught them how to live and how to work properly, paid financially for all their mistakes then he can write the answer in red ink. But if he has raised up some good respectable young citizens then he really has a right to throw out his chest. He really has accomplished something in this world. Can any man do a greater thing than raise a fine family of fine young citizens for our future America? If he builds an Empire Bridge, a great Dam, or becomes a President of a great company and still lets his children grow up in his great shadow to be social disgracees then he should hang his head in shame.
