MORMANS CELEBRATING

The Mormans who are making such important religious and business contributions to the Nyssa section are this week celebrating the 100th anniversary of the arrival of their forefathers into Salt Lake valley, Utah.

These L.D.S. people, who have come to this community in large numbers from Utah and Idaho, carry with them the pioneer spirit that prompted the early-day Mormans to seek new homes in the west. Along with the people of other religious faiths, the Mormans are pioneering in the field of agriculture in a new country that laid comparatively dormant until the establishment of the now famous Owyhee irrigation project.

The Mormans in this community are largely engaged in farming, although some of them are engaged in other types of business. They are recognized as good farmers and are apparently adept at the row crop type of farming. Along with being good farmers they are good citizens and constitute an asset to any community.

We feel that we bespeak the wish of the people of other faiths that the Mormans may have many more centuries in which to celebrate their anniversaries.

Except for the fact that an electric range can't talk and tell you when dinner is ready, it does about everything else to make meal preparation a simple job. It relieves you of most of the cooking chores, and just as a perfect servant should, an electric range helps keep your kitchen clean.

Even with guests coming for dinner, you can still plan to take the afternoon off, with assurance that your automatic oven or thrift cooker will cook the meal to perfection.
A cool, clean kitchen . . . economical cooking . . . less "clean-up" time . . . all these are yours with an electric range. The electric range combines the newest in work-saving features with the beauty of smart streamlined design. And Idaho Power's low electric rates mean real economy of operation.

Give electricity elbow room—it's more efficient when there are plenty of circuits and outlets. Insist on adequate wiring.

Your electrical dealer is receiving new electric ranges—and selling them rapidly—but he can show you a sample.
