LENDING PROGRAM
FEATURE IS ADDED
The farmers home administration has added a new feature to its lending program, which permits private lenders to make farm purchase, enlargement and development loans with mortgages insured by the federal government, announces Cecil J. Youngstrom, FHA field representative, Portland.

The authority for the insured farm mortgage program, states Youngstrom, is contained in the farmers home administration act of 1946, which amends the Bankhead-Jones farm tenant act. The original law specified that only direct government funds could be used in the FHA program.

The farm ownership program is designed to enable farm tenants, sharecroppers and farm laborers to buy and operate family type farms, and to enable owners of under-sized and under-developed farms to create adequate family farm units.

The new feature—providing insurance for mortgages of private lenders—is intended to extend the benefits of the program to larger numbers of people and to encourage private enterprise to make the loans.

Each insured mortgage loan is based upon a normal earning capacity appraisal of the farm by a federal appraiser. This appraisal must be approved by the FHA county committee made up of three persons, at least two of whom are farmers. The committee also considers the qualifications of applicants.

This type of loan is only available to applicants who are unable to get the necessary credit at the rates and terms prevailing in their community, Youngstrom adds. Veterans are given preference for all loans.

To protect the government's interest, the FHA assists each borrower to develop sound operation methods.

The 12 county FHA offices which are operated in Oregon, include one at Ontario.
