SOLD HORSE TO START SAWMILL
Here are the sawmilling Clarks—"Pop" Clark and his boys—in their busy mill near Hillsboro. From left—Keith and Dale Clark, Weaver "Pop" Clark and Kyle Clark. "Pop" sold his pet riding horse to start the mill in 1946. The operation has built up until today it takes their full time, that of "Pop's" brother, step-son, son-in-law and four others. They cut Douglas fir from nearby farm forest patches. Rough lumber is dressed by "Clark-made" equipment. The Clarks credit much of their success to the helpful services of the Hillsboro branch of First National. An indication of the growth of the business is the fact that "Pop" now has eight horses, replacing one he sold in '46.

FROM HORSESHOES TO LOGGING EQUIPMENT. Mrs. Paul Sowa and her son, Joe (shown at right), run a blacksmith shop in Woodburn. When her husband was accidentally killed in 1938, Mrs. Sowa, Joe and another of her seven children, Cecil, became partners in "Paul Sowa & Sons." Careful planning and "overseeing" by Mrs. Sowa, long hard work by her sons, and helpful cooperation from the Woodburn Branch of the First National Bank built a growing business. Today the firm manufactures specialty logging equipment and employs 14 people another of the thousands of businesses helping build Oregon.
