Corner of Building Washed Out

With an explosive roar a corner ripped from a brick building at 701 Westlake Ave. N. after water from a damaged hydrant washed under the foundation early last night.

MORE THAN AN ACCIDENT

No one killed, driver not injured, pedestrian leaps in time, but headlines overlooked $20,000 worth of brick, steel and glass collapsed as a direct result of the smashed fireplug.

Who will replace it? The driver... out of his income for 30 years? Or has he liability insurance—complete insurance—with General America?

Use caution against accidents; use insurance against financial ruin. Ask us for the best; ask about General's liability protection.

GEORGE KYLO REPLACES STUMPS WITH TURKEYS. Young George Kylo couldn't find a job in 1933, so he obtained 105 acres of logged-off land near Molalla and went to work on the army of stumps. His pluck attracted Marie Koltch. She became Mrs. Kylo in 1934. They tried turkey raising, but lost money the first year. However, encouraged by advice and financial help from the Molalla branch of the First National, they stuck to it. Today they market thousands of turkeys annually and grow feed and seed crops. Hard work and sound advice are building a good venture for George and Marie... as progressive businesses are helping build Oregon.

BUILDS PRIZE BEEF HERD.

In only three years a prize herd of registered Shorthorns has replaced dairy cows on the Roy L. Harris ranch near Prineville. (Shown are Mr. and Mrs. Harris and a son, Douglas, with a Shorthorn bull calf.) Building the herd of purebred beef cattle was a slow and costly task—but Harris' wife and their seven children backed his progressive planning. The First National Bank of Prineville aided in financing that speeded the transition. Today Harris' Shorthorns bring fancy prices from America's breeders—new income that is helping build Oregon.

THE KAUTUS BUILD BOATS.

Elo N. Kautus builds unusual sturdiness into commercial fishing craft. The Kautus' two-year-old plant (Mrs. Kautus is bookkeeper-painter) is at Jeffers Gardens on the Lewis and Clark river near Astoria. There, with his six craftsmen, Kautus puts into practice ideas he developed as a fisherman and as an employee of the area's famed builders of Columbia River gillnet type craft. Made to carry big fish loads, his 29-foot boats—fashioned of oak, Douglas fir and Port Orford cedar—withstanding the Pacific's most belligerent moods. With assistance from the First National, Kautus helps Oregon grow by meeting fishermen's boat needs.
