Americans Caught Flat-Footed

Late developments in the Korean war, in which the United States is deeply involved, further emphasize the fact that the American government, as always, was not prepared for the conflict.

For the third straight time, the United States was caught flat-footed by an enemy that had given months of indication that it intended to start trouble. The United States government had been told for several months that the North Koreans were preparing to attack the southern part of the nation, split into Russian and American spheres of influence. Despite these warnings the southern Koreans, the United States and united nations organizations were not ready for the attack. Whether they knew about the northern plans or not, the southern groups are due for criticism. Certainly the intelligence department should have known the northern plans, because the organization is designed to gather just such information.

Another interesting, yet disheartening phase of the Korean situation is the announcement by the administration that it did not change its foreign policy after the North Korean attack. If sending American soldiers into the front lines for the protection of a foreign country was not a change of policy, then the soldiers, supported with plenty of materiel, should have been on the ground to meet the attack.

Now that the bungling has been successfully accomplished in Washington, the American people will pay off in blood and money. However, we can't afford to complain too much because of danger of affecting morale, but the powers that be should have to take the scorching they are entitled to.

The strength displayed by the northerners indicates that Russia is actively supporting the attackers, but if Russia continues to hesitate to declare war or openly engage in the conflict the situation might be better than open warfare. A peaceful settlement of the world situation may be enhanced by the willingness of the United States to fight and the absence of a declaration of war.

Testing Of Herds Showing Increase

Don Humble, supervisor of the Malheur Dairy Herd Improvement association, has released the association for the month of June. He reports that there has been an increase of interest shown by new members wanting to test. This month four new standard members started cows on test.

Once again the Leroy Herrman Holstein herd of Nyssa was the top herd of the association. Mr. Herrman has 12 cows with 11 of them milking in June and the produced 19,616 pounds of milk. The herd average was 1635 pounds of milk per cow and 53.0 pounds of butterfat per cow. Beaumont and Toombs of Adrian, one of the association's new members, came in with a very good second. They have 15 registered Jerseys and all of them are milking. This herd had an average of 45.6 pounds of butterfat per cow. Rosel Hunter's small herd of registered Jerseys was third with an average of 43.9 pounds per cow. Lewis Johnson's herd of Jerseys near Vale, another new member, had a herd average of 42.9 pounds per cow. Ker Crest Holstein farm of Oregon slope had a herd average of 42.4 pounds butterfat per cow.

Individual top cow honors went to Mr. Herrman's Holstein cow "Queenie", with 100.9 pounds butterfat. Close behind her was a registered Jersey, "Hester" from the Al Thompson and Son herd of Adrian. This cow gave 96.5 pounds fat. Rosel Hunter's Jersey cow gave 93.5 pounds fat. Ker Crest Holstein farm held fourth and fifth places with 91.4 and 83.3 pounds butterfat, respectively. Wendall Richmond and Sons of Ontario had a Holstein cow with 80.3 pounds of butterfat for the month of June.

There were several new owner-sampler members this month also. O. D. Fulwyler of Willowcreek took top honors in this group with a herd average of 43.7 pounds butterfat. The association is steadily growing and it is hoped that within the near future it will be large enough to hire another supervisor. Anyone interested in dairy herd improvement association testing may obtain information by calling at the county agent's office in Ontario or by contacting any of the association members.
