Earnings Of Bank Reach $1,815,000

The earnings of The First National Bank of Portland for the first six months of 1950 were $1,815,000 as reported by President F. N. Belgrano, Jr. Pursuing the policy adopted in 1949, $300,000 was added to reserve for possible loan losses from the current six months earnings, making net earnings of $1,515,000.

Mr. Belgrano pointed to the fact that during these six months, deposits of the bank had increased $2,339,400 to a total of $478,766,582.05. He also pointed to the fact that loans had reached an all time high of $178,256,994.78, and that the increase of $25,201,932.76 was greater than in any previous six months period.

These figures are solely for The First National Bank of Portland and do not include the 15 banks with 17 offices which are affiliated with this institution. Deposits in the affiliated banks total $108,182,166.16 with loans of $28,781,589.73 and total resources of $115,775,111.87.

There are now 62 banking offices in the First National bank group. Before the end of the year two more offices will be added, one at Springfield, Oregon, which will be a branch of an affiliate, The First National Bank of Eugene, and one which will be known as the Industrial branch of The First National Bank of Portland, will be located on the block bounded by Northwest 18th and 19th avenues and Northwest Raleigh and Savier streets, Portland.
