IF You Prefer Fall

When the chill of the morning air adds "zip" to the routine lives of the farmer, businessman and laborer and leaves turn to yellow, red and gold, men turn to more vigorous pursuits for pleasure and profit.

The exhilarating and lovely weather of the eastern Oregon fall drives out the lazy moods created by the hot summer temperatures and leaves in their stead ambition, desire and strong courage. Like the physical body, the spirit takes a vacation in the summer-time and drops below the strata of normalcy, but when the tang of fall returns, man's spirit soars into the realm of anticipation and hopefulness.

Thus all of our seasons serve their purpose. We all have our favorites to which we would cling if we were financially able to move from place to place to avoid the wintry blasts of the northern hemisphere and the scorching rays of the sun in the southlands, but for a well-rounded life we must take the bitter with the sweet, the acid with the alkaline.

We have fall in which to recover from the lethargy of summer in preparation for winter chores and trials, we have winter to test our courage and our stamina and we have spring to give us appreciation of the beauties of nature and life in general and again summer to give us rest.

Some love the spring, when everything is bursting into life anew, some love the summer with its happy, carefree spirit of abandon, some love the winter because of the purity of its mantle of white, but for me, I'll take the mellowness of fall, when all nature seems to be in harmony with the laws of God and man, when the colors of the fields and gardens blend into a magic picture that seems to admonish mankind to heed the lesson of nature's loveliness.
