2500 Persons View Memorial Hospital

my energies to the advancement of this hospital. We must remember that this is just the commencement and our support must be continued in the future as it has been in the past. I feel sure from your past performance, there is no doubt about the future success of the hospital".

John O'Toole told the rather small crowd, the first of the hundreds due to call during the day, that "There are only a few high spots in a man's lifetime that stand out and in which he can take pride and satisfaction. Today, as we open this hospital for your inspection I know that I have reached such a high spot and am very grateful in having been permitted to assist in preparing for the opening of the hospital. I want to thank at this time all those who helped make this day such a success, the board of directors, the founders, service organization, the ladies auxiliary, who have worked so untrudgingly, and all of you who have come from far and near to help. Thank you all again from the bottom of my heart".

Mrs. Wesley Browne, president of the women's auxiliary, reviewed the history of the hospital project. She said "I will not attempt to give credit to any individual or group for their contribution to the success of this project, for there are far too many deserving credit to enumerate. The background of our hospital began some five years ago when the Nyssa Lions club, realizing the inadequate hospital facilities of our community, purchased the local nursing home and took over the management. Then began a series of projects to raise funds for a hospital.

In December, 1943 a group of interested persons met and formulated a more definite plan for a 24-bed hospital. In the same month, the name was chosen—the Malheur Memorial hospital—and was to be dedicated to the memory of our boys who died in world war II. After the board of directors had decided to secure the services of a financial adviser, Louis D. Barr came as adviser and conducted two successful fund-raising campaigns, which made possible this occasion today, the opening of the Malheur Memorial hospital".

Following the introduction of Fred W. Bracken, president of the founders service organization and the contractor, Leslie W. Stoker, the directors were presented as follows: Jared Lewis, Glea Billings, Arvel Child, George Schiemer, M. C. Seuell, L. G. Hawley, J. L. Herriman, Warren Farmer, Grant Rinehart and William Russell.

In the dedicatory prayer, Arvel L. Child, president of the Nyssa stake of the L. D. S. church, said in part: "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name. We,

a group of thy sons and daughters have gathered here today, as a fitting climax to years of dreams and toil and sweat and sacrifice of thy children, who pioneered this beautiful valley and made it to blossom as the rose. We are especially filled with joy as we stand before this beautiful building today, this community hospital made possible by the spirit of love and goodwill and helpfulness and sacrifice of the people of this valley and their friends.

"And now, oh Father, we humbly dedicate this building and everything pertaining to it, for the relief of pain and suffering among thy children. Bless the superintendent of this hospital. Great responsibility rests upon his shoulders. We humbly pray that thy spirit may always guide the physicians who serve here. Bless the technicians, the nurses, the office help, the books, the caretakers and any others who might labor here. May the spirit of kindness and love and helpfulness be ever present among them.

"And now, our Father, we present this building to thee. May it stand throughout the years as a monument to the love and devotion and unity of this people".

After the prayer, President Fischer cut a ribbon in front of the door and invited the visitors to enter. The 2500 visitors were guided through the building in groups of from 10 to 20 by guides, who explained the various pieces of equipment and the functions of the facilities. Those viewing the building came from 43 cities and towns in 12 states.

Continuing through the building for more than seven hours, the visitors viewed the great quantity of gifts given by Nyssa business and professional people for the first two babies to be born in the hospital, the mural given to the hospital by Marco Murolo of Portland and the plaques bearing the names of donors, as well as the equipment and furnishings. Except for completion of the heating system, the hospital was ready for the admission of patients Sunday.
