PLENTIFUL POWER

Helps Your Community Grow

Industry . . . large or small . . . looks at many things in selecting a community for a new plant location.

Some of the many factors include: availability of raw materials and markets, transportation, electric power supply, labor supply and taxes . . . to name a few.

Selection of a site is not by accident. It is one of the jobs of the industrial development department of Idaho Power to assist every community the company serves in providing information and help to industries interested in the growing Snake River Valley.

A look at the record shows this co-operative effort has paid off. In the most recent 5-year period for which figures are available, the number of firms engaged in manufacturing increased 66.6% in this area as against 27.3% for the entire United States. In construction firms the increase was 471.1% as compared to 116.8% for the nation.*

In more than 34 years, your electric company has never been "too late nor too little" with electric power to serve your needs, and today it is building and planning ahead of your needs. No community in the area served by Idaho Power has ever lost an industry due to the shortage of low-cost electric power.
