Business Trends Need Curbing

Big corporations and the circumstances that have created large concerns and mass production, aside from our basic freedoms, probably have been the greatest factors in the physical greatness of this country.

Big business has been a great benefit to the American people, but the value stemming from its greatness has apparently reached the saturation point. If big corporations are allowed to increase their power and continually spread into new fields through so-called integration of industry the "little" business man will disappear and with him many of the advantages of the free enterprise system.

Little businessmen in Nyssa and elsewhere, who acquiesce to this spread of big business are contributing to a condition that will seriously handicap their children and grandchildren, if not themselves. There are several ways for the small businessman to contribute, consciously or unconsciously to the spread of this business cancer and there are several ways in which they may oppose the spread, but in general they are too greedy and cautious to resist the encroachments of big business.

Great efficiency has been achieved by big business and more efficiency could be achieved, but only through a reduction in the freedom of opportunity, another factor that has made this country great. We need a leveling off process to keep corporations from becoming more powerful. The pendulum has swung too far for the good of the American people.

This trend, which admittedly creates greater efficiency and develops other benefits, threatens to create of the middle class a throng of people comprised entirely of wage earners whose chances for advancement will be greatly reduced if the cancerous industrial growth is allowed to spread.

Veterans Eligible For New Policies

Veterans who hold national service or U. S. government life insurance policies are now eligible to add disability income coverage to their policies. Charles M. Cox, veterans administration representative for eastern Oregon, announced today.

Administrator of veterans affairs, has ruled that the recent enactment of the servicemen's indemnity and insurance acts of 1951 does not bar veterans from the right to apply for the addition of the disability income provision to existing government policies.

The new legislation provides a free indemnity of $10,000 for persons in military service and prohibits the issuance of new policies under the old insurance plans. The right to reinstatement or convert such policies was continued in force.

The VA has ruled, Cox said, that the prohibition against issuance of new policies does not repeal a veteran's right to incorporate disability income protection into an existing policy so long as he can meet the health requirements.

The disability income rider pays the insured up to $5.75 a month for each $1000 of insurance to which it is added, in the event of total disability lasting six consecutive months or more.

This added protection, Cox explained is available at small additional premium cost to all holders of NSLI or USGLI originally granted on or before April 25, 1951, provided the veterans are in insurable health and are within the age limitations under 65 for USGLI and under 60 for NSLI.

When it's mealtime in Snake River Valley

LOOK TO AN ELECTRIC RANGE FOR COOLER CLEANER COOKING

Whether your menu calls for a top-of-the-stove meal or an oven-baked dinner, you can be sure that an electric range will cook it to perfection. That's why seven out of ten Snake River Valley households depend on efficient electric service when mealtime comes around.

They like electric cooking, too, because it's cooler—modern electric elements heat rapidly and cook faster. They like it because it's cleaner—no flame, no soot. And everyone knows that electric cooking is economical—at Idaho Power's low rates, it amounts to mere pennies a day.

Don't put off what you can have today. If you are not yet enjoying electric cooking, or if your old range should be replaced after years of faithful service, ask your dealer for a demonstration of the beautiful new ranges. With a modern electric range you can breeze through your summer cooking in less time and have a cleaner, cooler kitchen in the bargain.

Electricity is one of the few things you buy which still carries a pre-war price tag.
